Dear Educator,

Thank you for using a Minnesota Opera Opera Box. This collection of material has been designed to help any educator to teach students about the beauty of opera. This collection of material includes audio and video recordings, scores, reference books and a Teacher’s Guide.

The Teacher’s Guide includes Lesson Plans that have been designed around the materials found in the box and other easily obtained items. In addition, Lesson Plans have been aligned with State and National Standards. See the Unit Overview for a detailed explanation.

Before returning the box, please fill out the Evaluation Form at the end of the Teacher’s Guide. As this project is new, your feedback is imperative. Comments and ideas from you – the educators who actually use it – will help shape the content for future boxes. In addition, you are encouraged to include any original lesson plans. The Teacher’s Guide is intended to be a living reference book that will provide inspiration for other teachers. If you feel comfortable, include a name and number for future contact from teachers who might have questions regarding your lessons and to give credit for your original ideas. You may leave lesson plans in the Opera Box or mail them in separately.

Before returning, please double check that everything has been assembled. The deposit money will be held until I personally check that everything has been returned (i.e. CDs having been put back in the cases). Payment may be made to the Minnesota Opera Education Department. All forms of payment are accepted.

Since opera is first and foremost a theatrical experience, it is strongly encouraged that attendance at a performance of an opera be included. The Minnesota Opera offers Student Matinees and discounted group rate tickets to regular performances. It is hoped that the Opera Box will be the first step into exploring opera, and attending will be the next.

I hope you enjoy these materials and find them helpful. If I can be of any assistance, please feel free to call or e-mail me any time.

Sincerely,

Jamie Andrews

The lessons in this Teacher Guide are aligned with the current Minnesota Academic Standards, Arts K-12, and the National Standards for Music Education. It is not the intention of these lessons to completely satisfy the standards. This list only suggests how the standards and lesson objectives relate to each other.

MINNESOTA ACADEMIC STANDARDS, ARTS K-12

The Minnesota Academic Standards in the Arts set the expectations for achievement in the arts for K-12 students in Minnesota. The standards are organized by grade band (K-3, 4-5, 6-8, 9-12) into four strands that foster the development of students' artistic literacy.

The strands are as follows:
1. Artistic Foundations
2. Artistic Process: Create or Make
3. Artistic Process: Perform or Present, and

Each strand has one or more standards that can be implemented in the arts areas of dance, media arts, music, theater and/or visual arts. The benchmarks for the standards in each arts area are designated by a five-digit code. In reading the coding, please note that for code 0.3.1.5.2, the 0 refers to refers to the 0-3 (K-3) grade band, the 3 refers to the Artistic Process: Perform or Present strand, the 1 refers to the first (and only) standard for that strand, the 5 refers to the fifth arts area (visual arts), and the 2 refers to the second benchmark for that standard.

See the Minnesota Department of Education website for more information: education.state.mn.us/mde

- Poster board (not in Opera Box)

Procedure(s)
1. Divide class into groups. Assign research topics to each group related to Puccini. Direct the class to research their specific topics and prepare a presentation for the rest of the class based on their findings. The nature and scope of the presentations is at the discretion of the teacher.

   Suggested topics:
   - political and social culture of Italy during Puccini’s lifetime (1858–1924)
   - scientific and technological achievements during Puccini’s lifetime.
   - social life and class divisions in Italy and Europe during Puccini’s lifetime.
   - artistic and musical life in Italy and Europe between 1858–1924.
     - the rise in verismo opera
     - literary and artistic trends

2. Offer some guided (in-class) research time with students. Depending on students’ ability to conduct research, additional guidance might be needed.

3. Each group is to create a piece of the timeline poster that will be posted on the wall. It is suggested that the teacher predetermine what form the timeline will look like. For example, cut pieces of poster board, mark the time span and topic of each section and mount final piece on the classroom wall. Each piece of the timeline should contain 20 facts.

4. Student groups will give oral presentations on their topic. Each group should create five questions about their topic that they feel are the most important. Questions are to be submitted to the teacher prior to giving the presentation. The rest of the class should take notes on each presentation for a class-constructed test.

5. Put all questions together from each group and give test.

Assessment(s)
Assign value for class participation and group cooperation. In addition, assign value to each of the following activities:
- demonstration of checklist completed
- correct number of facts, clearly written, for piece of timeline
- all group members participating in presentation
- evidence of note-taking during all presentations

Lesson 4: Acting scenes from Turandot

Objective(s)
Students will act out scenes from Turandot to reinforce the concept about the importance of the acting as a part of opera.

Material(s)
• Libretto Turandot
• Acting Evaluation Worksheet (one copy per student) (see following page)

Procedure(s)
1. Have students read all or a portion of Act II, scene two, and/or Act III, scene one of Turandot.
2. In small groups, students will perform one of these excerpts. Special attention must be given to physical gestures. Exact reading of the text must also be included (no ad lib will be acceptable). Students should carefully read each line and think about how to physically interpret each emotion.
3. Each group will perform with the rest of the class serving as an audience. Students should take notes on the effectiveness of each performance. Students should be able to make specific comments regarding physical movement and vocal articulation. See the Acting Evaluation example on the following page
4. After all performances are completed, have a class discussion as to the effectiveness of each one.

Assessment(s)
Value should be given to quality of the reviews of peers, class participation in discussion and acting performance.

Additional Comment(s)
This lesson can be taught following various activities that may involve the study of drama and history of acting. This lesson can be maximized when used as a reinforcement of prior activities.

Videotaping the performances and presenting them on a public access or school channel may provide valuable public relations.
ACTING EVALUATION WORKSHEET

Lesson 4

NAME OF OBSERVER

NAME OF PERFORMERS

DIRECTIONS

Closely observe your peers as they perform scenes from Turandot. Look for the following elements in their performance. Be consistent and fair with each group.

(1) What was the single most effective gesture used by the group?

(2) Did the group performing “follow” each line of the text? Did they physically reinforce everything they were saying?

(3) Did the performers make eye contact with each other and/or audience?

(4) Was the voice of the performers used to create variety and emotion in the scene?

(5) Give one suggestion to the group to improve their performance.
Lesson 5: Translating “Nessun dorma” into other genres.

Students will understand the characteristics of this duet and translate those characteristics into other genres.

• CD Turandot (LONDON with Sutherland, Pavarotti, Metha)
• LIBRETTO Turandot

(1) As a class, listen to a recording of “Nessun dorma” (CD DISC 2, TRACK 5) while following a translation of the text.

(2) Discuss the following points:
   - Does the music relate to the text? (Could this music be used for different text?)
   - How does it (not) relate? (What does the music do to relate to the text?)
   - Does the content of the text have meaning in today’s society?
   - Is there a popular song that deals with the same emotions?

(3) Students are to take the text of “Nessun dorma” set it into another musical genre. For example, students may turn the text into a rap, country or pop song. Encourage the students to modernize the words.

(4) Students are to perform their compositions with the other students serving as the audience.

(5) Discuss as a class which performances were successful, why or why not? Include discussion of the effectiveness of the text separate from the music.

The final class performance will be evaluated on completeness of text and its understandability. The audience can provide feedback by determining the most creative and the most effective performance. Value will be given placed on class participation.
Lesson 6: Miming Turandot

Objective(s)
Students will physically recreate scenes from Turandot by miming. They will understand the elements of the drama and be able to transfer that knowledge to act out silent scenes.

Material(s)
- Libretto Turandot (one copy per student)
- Acting Evaluation Worksheet (see following page)

Procedure(s)
1. Students will read selected scenes from the Turandot libretto. Suggested scenes are the beginning of Act I until the end of the children’s chorus, or the beginning of Act II, scene one, or Act III, scene two.
2. Discuss the emotional elements that are in the scene, and identify which emotions can be conveyed through physical actions versus verbal communications.
3. In small groups, students will choose a scene and work together to analyze the emotional make-up of that scene. Then, they will rehearsal a scene by miming the actions. This will be acted out in front of the class.
4. Students will mime their selected scenes with the class serving as an audience. Use the Acting Evaluation Worksheet as a guide.

Assessment(s)
Value will be given to accuracy in miming the scene. Detail and nuance should be emphasized. Class participation will also be assessed.

Additional Comment(s)
A variation of this activity can be to let groups perform without announcing the scene they will be miming, but let the rest of the class compete to guess which it is.
ACTING EVALUATION WORKSHEET

Lesson 6

NAME OF OBSERVER

NAME OF PERFORMERS

DIRECTIONS

Closely observe your peers as they perform either the beginning of Act I until the end of the children’s chorus, or the beginning of Act II, scene one, or Act III, scene two. Look for the following elements in their performance. Be consistent and fair with each group.

(1) What was the single most effective gesture used by the group?

(2) Did the group performing “follow” each line of the text? Did they physically reinforce everything they were saying?

(3) Did the performers make eye contact with each other and/or audience?

(4) Give one suggestion to the group to improve their performance.
Lesson 7: Motives in *Turandot

Objective(s)
Students will learn how dramatic ideas are represented musically with motives (or leitmotif) in Puccini’s use of the orchestra.

Material(s)
- Reference books about Puccini
- CD Turandot (one copy per student)
- FULL and/or VOCAL SCORE Turandot (one copy per student)

Procedure(s)
Prior to teaching this lesson, it is recommended that the teacher read The Complete Operas of Puccini (pp. 243–272) for a basic understanding of the opera and explanations of motives.

1. Define motive and how that is represented in the music of an opera.
2. Play a few short excerpts (motive) for the class. Ask students to name all the instruments used. For example, in the opening scene, notice that Puccini uses every instrument in the score and in various combinations to represent being in “The walls of the Violet City: the City of the Celestial Empire.” Raise students’ awareness to Puccini’s speed in developing his ideas and the actual “clock time” in which he does this. Suggest to students that these musical devices will be used repeatedly to enhance the story.
3. Play other motives Puccini uses in the opera. Have students describe what they think the music is trying to convey. Have them support their suggestions with musical examples, i.e., the end sounds sad because of the high, slow strings, etc.
4. Play the entire Act III and ask students to raise their hands when they hear a motive. Ask students if they hear the motives in variation or in the original way it was first played.

Assessment(s)
Students are to define motive and be able to describe what motive they hear while listening to Turandot.

Additional Comment(s)
A variation of this lesson could be, while explaining motive, to use the piano to play the examples. Then play the audio recording with the instrumentation.

Depending on the knowledge of the score, the teacher could isolate and play a motive as it reoccurs through out the opera on the piano. Then students can be asked to identify the motive every time it is played.
Lesson 8: “That was a great performance and I know why!”

Objective(s)
Students will learn to critically analyze elements of operatic performance.

Material(s)
- DVD Turandot
- Theater reviews from newspapers, etc. (not in Opera Box)

Procedure(s)
(1) Have class discussion about theatre, movie, and/or television reviews in newspapers or television. Ask students about quality if these reviews. Do the students find them helpful? Why or why not? Suggest that the writers and readers both must settle on a set of criteria for the review to be successful.

(2) Have student find reviews and analyze the criteria that the reviewer basis the review on. For example, acting, production, soundtrack, special effects, etc.

(3) Students are to create a visual description (chart) describing criteria used.

(4) Show Act I of Turandot and have students evaluate performance on DVD based on their criteria on chart. Discuss the similar and dissimilar traits.

(5) Have students revise criteria to be tailored towards opera. Watch additional acts from Turandot.

(6) Student will write a review of a live performance of Turandot.

Assessment(s)
Value will be given to class participation, quality of evaluation chart and depth of analysis. Review of live performance should contain multiple elements.

Additional Comment(s)
This lesson can be extended to include students writing a review about a live performance they attend. For example, this lesson could be started prior to attending a performance of Turandot and as a follow-up assignment, have students write a review about their experience. Post reviews on the school website.

Turandot – Synopsis

ACT I

Turandot, daughter of Emperor Altoum, has decreed that she will only marry if a suitor of noble blood can answer three riddles. If he cannot, the price will be his head. The most recent failed candidate, the Prince of Persia, is to be executed at the moon’s rising. In the commotion outside the palace a blind man falls to the ground, and his companion, Liù, asks for help. They are aided by a disguised Calaf, who recognizes the man as his long-lost father, Timur, the banished ruler of his land. Calaf, like his father, is running from enemies and concealing his identity, known only as the Unknown Prince. Liù continues to aid Timur even in exile because years before, as she explains, Calaf bestowed a smile upon her.

The people impatiently await the beheading. As the Prince of Persia enters, the crowd is suddenly moved and pleads with the princess to pardon him. Turandot appears and dispassionately confirms the prince’s sentence with a silent gesture. Calaf is immediately entranced by her beauty. Timur and Liù try to convince him to leave with them, but he breaks away and attempts to announce himself as a suitor. The three ministers of the Imperial Household, Ping, Pang and Pong, warn him of his folly, but to no avail. In one final attempt Liù begs him to listen, but Calaf ignores her entreaties and ceremoniously rings the gong, signifying his challenge for Turandot’s hand.

ACT II

Ping, Pang and Pong prepare for the eventuality of a wedding or a funeral. They discuss their misery since Turandot reached a marriageable age, numbering the many noble suitors who have met a deadly fate while reminiscing about life in their native provinces. Is there truly a man whose passion can melt Turandot’s icy heart? Their hopes are guarded.
A crowd assembles for the trial of the Three Enigmas. Turandot devised this manner of courtship to avenge her ancestress, Lo-u-Ling, who was captured, raped, then put to death by marauding invaders. She offers Calaf one last chance to withdraw, but he stands firm in his resolve. The first question is offered: “What is born each night and dies each dawn?” Calaf correctly answers, “Hope.” Slightly taken aback, Turandot poses the next riddle: “What flares warm like a flame, yet it is no flame?” Calaf hesitates, then answers perfectly, “Blood.” Visibly shaken, Turandot asks the final question: “The ice that gives you fire, what can it be?” Calaf hesitates, then triumphantly cries: “Turandot!” The people celebrate his victory, but Turandot pleads with the emperor not to be given to this unknown entity. Seeing her distress Calaf decides to play her game and offers a riddle of his own: “If before morning you can discover the name I bear, I shall forfeit my life.”

ACT III

It is decreed that none shall sleep, under penalty of death, until the name of the Unknown Prince is discovered. Calaf expresses his conviction that he alone will reveal the secret. Ping, Pang and Pong offer any prize, including his safe escape, if he tells them his name. Having been seen with Calaf, Timur and Liu are captured and are about to be tortured. Liu steps forward and says that she knows the prince’s name but will keep it as her eternal secret. She grabs a soldier’s dagger and kills herself. Calaf reproaches the princess for her cruelty and then takes hold of her and boldly kisses her. Turandot’s strength and desire for revenge crumbles, and she weeps for the first time. Calaf reveals his true identity, thereby putting his life in Turandot’s hands. Trumpets announce the arrival of dawn and the assembly of the court. Turandot addresses the emperor and the people: “I have discovered the stranger’s name – it is Love!”

Scene
The terms used to identify each section is the page found in the Schirmer vocal score. (VS)

Musical Description
The terms used here are the tempo markings in the score. The key given is decided by the tonality at the beginning of the scene. Significant changes in tonality are noted.

Orchestration
Comments given here are general in nature and are intended to give the listener some insight into the use of the orchestra. This is another element used to tell the story. Descriptions are not necessarily from Puccini, but suggest what we know about the orchestra at that time.

Themes
Identified here are significant melodies used and sometimes reused by various characters. The names of the themes are based on common use found in standard scholarly books about Puccini.

Drama
This is the basic story line. Main characters are given in shorthand:

The music is organized in massive blocks, each motivically based – a system which shows to particular advantage in Act I, arguably the most perfectly constructed act in Puccini’s output; while the scoring shows a rare imagination in the handling of large forces (the writing for xylophone alone immediately attracts the attention). Recapitulation:

The flow chart provides a comprehensive overview of Act III of Turandot, detailing the musical description, orchestration, themes, drama, and related information for scenes one and two. The chart highlights key musical moments, such as Liù’s final aria and the threnody for her death, as well as significant dramatic events leading to the resolution of the prince’s identity and the disintegration of Liù’s curse. This detailed analysis underscores the emotional depth and narrative complexity of Puccini’s opera, underscoring its status as one of the most celebrated works in the operatic repertoire.
Giacomo Puccini was born into a family of court composers and organists in the historic city of Lucca, Italy. With a strong feeling of tradition in the Puccini family, it was expected that Giacomo would assume his deceased father’s position as Maestro di Cappella when he came of age. By 14 he already was playing organ in a number of the town’s churches.

Albina Magi, the composer’s mother, also came from a family of musicians. Her brother, Fortunato, became her son’s first music teacher. His uncle was a strict instructor and was known to kick Puccini when he made mistakes. For his part, Puccini was unruly, easily bored and preferred to hunt for bird’s nests rather than study. Seeing little progress, Albina decided a new teacher was in order and sent the boy to Carlo Angeloni, a former pupil of her husband. Giacomo’s attitude and study habits quickly changed.

Money was scarce for the family, and to supplement his church earnings Puccini would play piano at the local bars and at houses of “ill repute.” He withheld a small percentage of his earnings for cigarettes and began the bad habit of smoking (which ultimately caused his death). As a young man, Puccini was determined to be rich and independent. His teacher introduced him to opera through the study of Verdi’s piano scores. Then in 1879, Puccini attended his first opera performance, Aida, and was deeply moved – his destiny was to be a composer for the theater.

He knew it was necessary to study in the Italian operatic capital, Milan. After completing studies at the Pacini Institute of Music in Lucca, Puccini enrolled at the Milan Conservatory in 1880 under the auspices of a royal scholarship. His living expenses were provided by a loan from an uncle but money was always tight. Puccini lived the bohemian life of a poor student and became acquainted with many important musical and literary figures. For a short while, he shared a room with the composer Pietro Mascagni, who became famous for his one-act opera Cavalleria rusticana. To save money, the two of them would cook meals in their room and, as this was strictly forbidden, one would play the piano loudly to drown out the noise of pots and pans. One can see how the composer drew from his own life experiences in the writing of his opera, La bohème.

In 1883 at the age of 25, Puccini graduated with a diploma in composition from the Milan Conservatory. His thesis composition, Capriccio sinfonico, was played by the student orchestra and received high praise from influential critics. This was the start of a celebrated career.
Puccini was not a prolific composer. Unlike most of his contemporaries, he produced his operas at long intervals, partly because of his fastidiousness in choosing subjects, several of which he took up only to abandon after several months, and partly because of his constant demands for modifications of the texts. Much of his time, too, was spent in hunting in the marshes around his home and in trips abroad to supervise revivals of his works.

The composer's first work for the stage, Le villi, was originally submitted to a contest sponsored by the wealthy music publisher, Edoardo Sonzogno. The one-act opera received not even honorable mention, but Puccini was certain of its merit. He and librettist Ferdinando Fontana began to canvass the opera to the broader circle of the Italian intelligentsia. One of these individuals was the highly influential librettist and composer, Arrigo Boito, who was instrumental in getting Le villi staged.

The reception to the new work was mixed, but the revised two-act version was staged in a number of cities outside of Italy (a remarkable feat for such a young composer). Puccini’s next opera, Edgar, however, was a resounding critical failure, yet the astute publisher, Giulio Ricordi, found fault in the libretto only and promise in the music. He pitted himself against the shareholders of his publishing house who demanded that Puccini be released from retainer. Ricordi’s confidence was rewarded with Manon Lescaut, Puccini’s first true success.

In 1884, Puccini became acquainted with Elvira Gemignani who was encouraged by her husband, a pharmacist and former classmate of Puccini’s, to take voice lessons with the composer. Shortly after his mother’s death, he was joined by Elvira and her daughter, Fosca, in Milan. She left her son, Renato, with her husband. Two years later she gave birth to their only child, Antonio, which caused a great scandal in Puccini’s birthplace of Lucca – his family, very conventional and religious, was outraged. He seldom visited that city again in his lifetime.

With the popularity of Manon Lescaut, Puccini was now generally considered by the Italian art circle to be Verdi’s successor (even by the great composer himself). As the royalties began rolling in, Puccini began to show a predilection for machines and gadgets, in particular fast automobiles and motor boats. His solitary nature drew him to a purchase a villa near the sea, surrounded by the mountains at Torre del Lago. Through the years, this villa became a home base where he could enjoy his passion for hunting and fishing, along with the nature and silence of the surroundings.

During the 1890s, Puccini began working with Luigi Illica, who worked out the scheme and drafted the dialogue, and the poet and playwright Giuseppe Giacosa, who put the lines into verse. Although they had participated on Manon Lescaut (in a string of several librettists) their first true collaboration was La bohème in 1896, followed four years later by Tosca and then Madame Butterfly four years after that. Giacosa died in 1906, putting an end to the successful team that produced three of Puccini’s most enduring works.

In 1904, Giacomo and Elvira were finally married legally, following her first husband’s death. Their relationship, however, was a constant storm. She was insanely jealous, and a letter, written prior to their union, stated her decision to leave him. Many of her accusations about him were not unfounded. The composer had quite a weakness for women and carried on many extramarital affairs throughout his life.

While Puccini was recuperating from an automobile accident, a young girl named Doria Manfredi was hired as a nurse and maid. She remained in the household as the Puccinis’ maid. Elvira saw the makings of an affair and immediately discharged her. But that was not enough. She continued her slanderous accusations through the small village, and the townspeople, aware of her husband’s past philandering, quite naturally believed her. The innocent girl, totally humiliated, took poison and died after five days of unbearable suffering. Giacomo took refuge in Rome and Elvira fled to Milan. Doria’s family sued Elvira following an autopsy that proved Doria’s virginity.

Puccini and his wife lived apart for four months while Elvira persisted in defending her legal position. The case was tried and she was sentenced to five months’ imprisonment – but Puccini made a large financial settlement with the Manfredi family and the lawsuit was dropped. In September of 1909, Giacomo, Elvira and Antonio were reunited at Torre. A month later he wrote, “In my home I have peace – Elvira is good – and the three of us live happily together.”

Puccini’s later operas were quite varied in their styles and subjects. La fanciulla del West, set in the American West, is notable for its advanced impressionistic orchestration and composition. La rondine was designed to be a musical comedy in the Viennese style but seemed more related to La traviata than to Die Fledermaus. Il trittico was an evening of one-act operas that are quite a mixed bag: Il tabarro was Puccini’s bow toward the verismo style; Suor Angelica is a gripping emotional drama set in a nunnery; Gianni Schicchi is a comic masterpiece that features Puccini at his most exuberant. There is a thought that Puccini was mocking his own success with this piece.

At the age of 60, the composer set out to write an opera that was atypical of his past style. He studied the developments in contemporary music and based the new work on Count Carlo Gozzi’s fable about the cruel Chinese princess Turandot. The completion of the work was cut short due to his ill-health.
Puccini had been dealing with a persistent cough for months. He began complaining of stinging sore throats and his diagnosis revealed cancer of the throat. He traveled to Brussels to receive radium therapy, accompanied by his son and stepdaughter – Elvira had bronchitis and remained in Milan. Radioactive needles were inserted into the tumor. Initially, the doctor was optimistic, but four days later, the composer suffered a heart attack. Puccini died on November 29, 1924 and his remains are now entombed in the chapel of his villa at Torre.

Although Turandot was left unfinished, the conductor Arturo Toscanini entrusted its completion to another Ricordi composer, Franco Alfano. In 1926, the opera premiered under the baton of Toscanini. Out of respect for the composer, the maestro stopped where Puccini had written his last notes. He turned to the audience and emotionally said, “At this point the master laid down his pen.”

Puccini has been much maligned for his flirtation with popular music, but he had an uncanny feel for a good story and talent for enthralling yet economical music. His experiments with tonality and form, while constant, were always subtle, and, unlike his contemporary Stravinsky, he did not seem to need to be controversial. His melodies are mostly simple stepwise vocal lines, yet with them he managed to create arias of astonishing beauty. The use of orchestra is economical and to the point – few operas of his have overtures and Puccini often captures the right dramatic moments with just a splash of colorful chords. Though his personal life was plagued with self-doubt and laborious perfectionism, Puccini profoundly influenced the world of opera with a deep understanding of music, drama and humanity.

Turandot – Background Notes

Though written in the early 1920s, Turandot is the last great opera in the tradition of ottocento Italian technique. In spite of its more progressive elements – biting tonalities, Impressionist textures and through-composed urgency – Giacomo Puccini’s final opus falls in the shadow of the 19th century, a testimony to all of the era’s best qualities. Nothing in the genre produced since that second decade has surpassed this quintessential opera’s lasting popularity.

Its genesis was not without its difficulties. True to his usual routine, Puccini began searching for potential operatic subjects immediately after the Italian premiere of Il trittico in 1919. It must have been a laborious process when one considers the number of possibilities the composer pondered before making a commitment – his relatively small œuvre testifies to a lasting insecurity over getting just the right text. Unlike Verdi, Puccini was not a literary man and frequently relied on others for suggestions only to thanklessly discard them later on. For this particular round he considered a dramatization of Oliver Twist (to be called Fanny), an adaptation of Shakespeare’s The Taming of the Shrew (the libretto, Christopher Sly, was to become Sly, set by Ermanno Wolf-Ferrari in 1927) and The Son-Daughter, another play by David Belasco (whose Madame Butterfly and The Girl of the Golden West the composer already had adapted).

Hoping to revive the successful team of Luigi Illica and Giuseppe Giacosa (authors of his three most favored operas), Puccini engaged two librettists, Giuseppe Adami and Renato Simoni. They functioned in a similar manner as their predecessors – Adami worked out the dialogue and drafted the scenario while Simoni put the text into verse. At first they proposed an original drama set in the suburbs of London during the 1830s, but Puccini wasn’t interested. Then Simoni, a Gozzi scholar and author of his own play, Carlo Gozzi (1903), put forth the 18th-century playwright’s Turandotte. Puccini was familiar with the recent Max Reinhardt production of Gozzi’s play (adapted by Karl Vollmoeller) and had been impressed – “… above all accentuate the passion of Turandot, who has been buried for so long in the ashes of her deep pride.”

Gozzi’s Turandot was cast as a lengthy five-act drama, which the librettists had to condense considerably. Though the creators toiled over whether or not the opera would have two or three acts, they did agree on a concise dramatic flow that would take place in a narrow Aristotelian timeframe – from moonrise to sunrise. Gozzi’s fascination with the Italian commedia dell’arte required four of the traditional masks (Pantalone, Tartaglia, Brighella, Truffaldino) to serve in the royal household. Puccini was weary of this antiquated theatrical cliché but reconsidered later in the process – their inclusion, albeit redefined as the Chinese ministers Ping, Pang and Pong, would breathe a little Italian local color into a fairy tale steeped in chinoiserie (the numbers 3, 6 and 8 figure prominently in this production). He hoped they would inject a little comic relief into the serious, mostly barbaric plot.

The focus of the drama changed as well. For its day Gozzi’s Turandot is a surprisingly feminist work: an individual living in the shadow of power, tired of the subsidiary role women had to play in the culture of ancient China, is determined to control her own destiny and devises a system of riddles to promote her superiority over men. In the opera her motivation is mollified to avenging a ravaged ancestress, which thinly veils her own fears of sexual experience. The emperor very much regrets the pact he made with his daughter in good faith – Gozzi’s play indicates every beheading of a royal prince initiates another war with a foreign country. An additional character (excised in the opera), the prince’s former tutor Barach, is introduced and with him resides Calaf’s secret identity. The Unknown Prince is introduced to Turandot via her portrait, which has an almost Medusa-like effect on its viewer – instead of immediately turning to stone, they immediately fall hopelessly in love (in the opera, Calaf first sees Turandot in corporal form as she silently imposes her death sentence on the Prince of Persia – a stroke of genius postponing her vocal appearance to Act II). Barach is later tortured and imprisoned for his knowledge, but he refuses to reveal anything (his purpose is transferred to Liù).

The tightening of the play’s denouement in the opera posed its own problems. Finding out Calaf’s unknown name is key to both works, but Gozzi’s plan proved to be too intricate and time-consuming, involving too many characters. His Turandot discovers the name by way of her servant, who turns on Calaf when her own amorous advances are repelled. Turandot intends to set him free but is moved when Calaf attempts to kill himself if she will not submit (the sentence of his execution having been commuted much earlier in the play). Puccini invented the character of Liù in part to solve this problem, conflating three of Gozzi’s handmaids into one and transferring Calaf’s aborted suicide to Liù’s fatal one. The design was intended to thaw Turandot’s icy demeanor with Liù’s self-sacrifice, but in the finished product, his efforts seemed to have backfired – the quick transition to Calaf’s kiss and the ensuing love duet makes both characters appear quite callous in light of Liù’s recent demise.

Many have tried to draw the psychology out of this scene – Puccini’s neurotic tendency to provide a death scene and the need to mark Turandot’s transformation from monster to woman, not by compassion for Liù but with a sexual symbol, a kiss. It is difficult to ignore a parallel to the real-life tragedy of Doria Manfredi, the young maid who was driven to suicide after the composer’s imperious and jealous wife, Elvira, suspected her of having an affair with Puccini and did her very best to slander the girl’s good name (Puccini was, in fact, secretly involved with her cousin). Whatever the comparison to Turandot and Liù may be, the composer’s victimized servant girl joins a long line of ill-fated Puccini heroines.

By March 1924 the composer had completed the orchestration of the opera up to the chords following Liù’s funeral cortege. What remained was the final duet and conclusion. Puccini was anxious to obtain the remaining lines from his librettists, who were somewhat dilatory in their work as they pursued other projects. In October, Puccini finally had received the ending of the opera, but by that time he was involved in a fight for his life. A persistent pain in his throat had been diagnosed as cancer, and after seeing several doctors, Puccini agreed to see a specialist in Brussels. There several radioactive needles were inserted into his throat in a painful operation that required the composer to be conscious for fear of the strain on his heart. At first the prognosis was good, but four days later he unexpectedly suffered a cardiac arrest and died.
Arturo Toscanini, slated to conduct the premiere, made it his mission to see the opera completed. Puccini had left behind a number of sketches for the final bars of music and had played some of the excerpts for the conductor before his death. Franco Alfano was engaged to bring these ideas to fruition. Alfano was a composer of some merit but was chosen chiefly because it was believed he would not imprint too much of his style upon Puccini’s own. What may have appeared to be a great honor became a painful task, one that Alfano took on with some trepidation. Throughout the process, he was bullied by his own publisher, the House of Ricordi, and was not allowed to review Puccini’s orchestration for the rest of the opera until very late in the process. The premiere was rescheduled for the first anniversary of Puccini’s death in November, but an eye ailment delayed Alfano’s completion of the opera. Upon finally hearing the finished ending, Toscanini discovered that Alfano had not used all of the fragments and felt there was too much of the younger composer’s original music. He was forced to revise his ending, shortening it by about 100 bars and incorporating more of Puccini’s ideas. It is this version that is generally performed, but at the belated premiere on April 25, 1926, Toscanini refused to conduct the new ending (in part out of respect for the dead composer but also with a certain animosity toward Alfano), resting his baton after Liu’s death and stating to the audience, “At this point the Maestro died.” It appears Toscanini may not have participated in any of the subsequent performances, handing them over to Ettore Panizza ¹. According to one commentator, Alfano’s original ending was the only one engraved at the time, as indicated by the disposizione scenica and by the first printing of the piano-vocal score. Though further productions in Dresden, Vienna and Berlin later that year may have also performed Alfano I, the shorter version (Alfano II, heard today) became the preferred version, until in 1983, New York City Opera “rediscovered” the earlier effort. Others have tried to reconstruct Puccini’s final intentions, most notably Luciano Berio in 2001. The absolute success of these various attempts remains debatable.

Turandot occupies a unique point in the history of opera. It takes an about-face from the realism of Italian verismo style popular at the turn of the century (marked by the works of Ruggero Leoncavallo, Pietro Mascagni and Umberto Giordano, all but a handful moribund by 1924), moving toward the vogue for fantasy-fable themes of the early 20th century (evidenced by Igor Stravinsky’s Le Rossignol, Ferruccio Busoni’s Turandot, Richard Strauss’ Die Frau ohne Schatten and Sergei Prokofiev’s L’amour des trois oranges, among others). Arguably seconded by Strauss’ Der Rosenkavalier, Benjamin Britten’s Peter Grimes or Stravinsky’s The Rake’s Progress, Turandot remains the most frequently performed opera of those composed to date.

His dramas are rarely performed today, but Carlo Gozzi’s works still live in operas by Puccini, Richard Wagner, Hans Werner Henze and Prokofiev. Gozzi (1720–1806) was born to a proud Venetian noble family that had fallen on hard times—two thirds of their hereditary villa, which once included a small theater, had been sold brick by brick in order to raise more ill-spent capital. His first play, L’amore delle tre melarancie (The Love for Three Oranges), was intended to be his only drama, but its enormous popularity lead to further works. This rather amateurish pursuit quickly put him into a theatrical imbroglio with fellow playwright Carlo Goldoni (1707–1793), a noted dramatist and librettist (of special interest is his play Don Giovanni Tenorio, which served to inspire parts of Mozart’s opera by the same name). Their point of contention was the 16th-century Italian commedia dell’arte, an improvised comedy with stock characters, predictable situations and plenty of slapstick and vulgarity. Commedia dell’arte was in decline by the 18th century, but Goldoni hoped to give it new life by eliminating much of the buffoonery and introducing a socially progressive, newly enlightened pragmatism, with the actors conforming to predetermined text instead of improvisation, and requiring the largely middle-class audience to face its own vices and virtues. Gozzi preferred a more traditional approach—while also forcing his actors to adhere to specific lines, he interwove the traditional masked characters into his own magical world of mysticism and allegory. Gozzi believed he could attract large audiences with frivolously titled, unrealistic plots.

He was right—Gozzi’s plays were exceedingly popular, forcing Goldoni to leave Venice and seek his fortune elsewhere. Though the latter would achieve greater renown in literary history, Gozzi’s star continued to rise beyond the Italian border. With the transition to Romanticism, his dramas were of particular interest to the German precursors of the movement. Friedrich von Schiller would make a translation/adaptation of Turandot to be directed by Johann Wolfgang von Goethe. (Schiller’s version would later be translated back into Italian by Andrea Maffei, Verdi’s good friend and sometimes collaborator.) Gozzi’s dark-edged fantasy also fueled the imagination of E.T.A. Hoffmann, who was not only a writer but also a composer of some merit, as well as the similarly morose American poet Edgar Allan Poe, who referred to Gozzi’s Il corvo when he wrote The Raven. Wagner adapted La donna serpente to become his early opera Die Feen, and Puccini’s Le villi, owes a debt of gratitude to the playwright as well. Turandot became the most frequently adapted of Gozzi’s narratives, set five times during the 19th century (including one opera by Puccini’s teacher, Antonio Bazzini, then another by Busoni in 1917), before the composer would get his hands on it.
Naturally Gozzi’s Turandot is a far more complicated matter than Puccini’s opera, incorporating many more characters and subsidiary plots. The central themes remain – the idea of a life threatening challenge-by-riddle and the overall “battle of the sexes” – and can trace their lineage back to Greek mythology. We recall Oedipus’ encounter with the Sphinx before the gates of Thebes and the victim-devouring monster’s seemingly unsolvable three-part riddle (“What walks on four feet in the morning, on two at midday and on three in the evening?”). Oedipus offers up the correct answer (“Man”), which gains him an easy victory and the rule of the surrounding lands. Man pitted against Woman goes back to the creation of the Amazon state through the conquest by invading and ravaging marauders. Queen Taina is forced to marry the Ethiopian King Vexoris, but she manages to murder him on their wedding night. Her bold act incites a rebellion, and the victorious Amazons institute an all-female rule. Taina’s second spouse can only be a man who bests her on the battlefield.

Gozzi knew of these precedents but more likely turned to the Far East for inspiration, as he often did. Turandot may be of Chinese lore, but the play draws its specifics from such titles as The Travels of Marco Polo, The Persian Tales and The Arabian Nights. Like the Amazons, Polo’s adventures include a princess committed to marrying the unlikely suitor who could prove her equal in the arena. François Péris de la Croix’s French translation of the tale L’histoire du prince Calaf et de la princesse de la Chine (1712) most directly inspires the action of Turandot, though among Scheherazade’s 1,001 stories there is one appropriately titled Paroles sous les 99 têtes coupées (Wisdom under the 99 Severed Heads). Here the poor prince must endure a daylong battery of riddles (which he aptly answers) and gains the advantage only when the princess takes a moment to rest her voice. His enigma-in-return proves unsolvable, and she readily agrees to marry him.

This is hardly the case with Gozzi’s Turandot. Instead of Puccini’s myth-like, ice-hearted “daughter of heaven” we find a very real person, proud of her intelligence, badly spoiled by her father and frustrated by the subservient role required of women. Her professorial brain is her only weapon. When Calaf answers her enigmas correctly, she pouts and whines, claiming that she had not had sufficient time to prepare really difficult ones since the unfortunate Prince of Samarkand has only just received his death sentence. Exhausted by the external conflicts his savage pact has wrought (once made under duress as his daughter lay gravely ill), Emperor Altoum stands firm in the face of the princess’ tantrum. Even after Calaf’s offer of his own riddle – that of his unknown name and his father’s – Altoum encourages her to accept his hand in lieu of facing another public humiliation. The drama becomes very much about Turandot’s rigid pride rather than her fear of intimacy, and rightly so – she has been smart enough to author a large body of impossible conundrums, outwitting 99 noble princes to date.
We see a very human side of Turandot as she uses deception and guile to wangle her way out of a desperate situation, while her slave Adelma becomes a useful pawn in getting to the ultimate truth. Hardly a sensitive, caring Liù-type, Adelma has her own agenda. She herself had once been a princess but was captured after her father fought an ill-conceived war against Altoum – apparently her brother had been among those foolish enough to seek Turandot’s hand. Forced to serve Turandot and pretend she is a friend, Adelma is naturally embittered, but the situation is complicated further when she recognizes Calaf as a man from the past – he had been employed as her gardener during his own princely exile (he and his parents had been nomadically traveling incognito, perilously pursued by the conqueror of their native Astrakhan). Now that Adelma knows he is of royal blood she regrets not having followed her earlier attraction and bothering to learn his name.

Adelma tries to convince Calaf that running away with her is his best option, but he remains smitten by Turandot’s visage and blatantly uninterested in Adelma. She becomes irate and manages to trick Calaf’s name out of him, which she then reveals to Turandot. At the moment of reckoning, Turandot at first pretends that she has lost the battle, but without warning, throws her hollow victory in Calaf’s face. When he desperately tries to stab himself, her emotions turn completely – moved by his noble act, she suddenly agrees to the marriage. Adelma’s hopes are now vanquished, and she takes a turn with the dagger but is stopped by Calaf, who requests that his new father-in-law restore her kingdom.

The ending is a tidy one – in contrast to the operatic Turandot’s bold proclamation of newly found love, Gozzi’s heroine delivers a curtain speech implicitly intended for the audience, sheepishly begging the pardon of all men.

Commedia dell’arte evolved during the 16th century from improvisatory scenes played at county fairs and marketplaces into a somewhat codified art form involving stock characters with predictable behavior and costume. Derived in part from the custom of more frequent commedia dell’arte performances during Carnival, a time for anonymous celebration of the deadly sins, acts that would also make their way into commedia plots. The use of masks further obscures the identity of the actual person, reinforces the character “type” and captures mankind’s many faces. Like the Renaissance itself, the genre spread quickly across Europe. Brought to France by Catherine de’ Medici during the reign of her son, Charles IX, commedia dell’arte underwent a revival in 18th-century France and is found most famously in the works of Molière. In England, Shakespeare (whose sources were frequently Italian) would draw upon commedia plots and would sometimes introduce a “zanni” or nameless clown as a comic or sagacious figure (from which the word “zany” is derived).

Though only visual evidence remains (as the plots were never scripted), elements of commedia dell’arte most clearly can be found in the Figaro trilogy of Pierre Augustin Caron de Beaumarchais realized operatically by Wolfgang Amadeus Mozart’s Le nozze di Figaro (The Marriage of Figaro) and Gioachino Rossini’s Il barbiere di Siviglia (The Barber of Seville). Of Italian origin. The crafty valet, left as a foundling (but thinks he the son of a noble), Truffaldino/Arlecchino easily translates into Figaro himself, a mixture of wit and ignorance but adept at slipping out of tricky situations. The nameless Lovers (sometimes identified as Lindoro and Isabella) transmute into the youthful infatuation between the count and Rosina. The characteristics of Il dottore and Pantalone are seen in Dr. Bartolo, the doddering, slightly stupid older man (though probably only middle-aged by Renaissance standards) in search of a young bride, a bit of a dolt, stingy and verbose. The slander-wielding, go-between Don Basilio is a conflation of several commedia characters’ darker side (the musical Brighella and Scapino in particular). Equally important is the pace of the production itself. The slapstick comedy of characters hiding behind chairs and inside closets, jumping out windows and receiving blows meant for others, and creating deception by use of disguise are all descended from the commedia dell’arte, particularly seen in the 18th-century plays of Carlo Goldoni (also a librettist to many opera buffa) and Carlo Gozzi (later to inspire several 19th- and 20th-century operas).

Unable to survive the Age of Sensibility, the art form seems to have died in the written works of these two authors, yet commedia dell’arte remained of interest in the operatic world. Donizetti’s L’elisir d’amore features a potion-pushing charlatan in the character of Dr. Dulcamara as well as the braggart soldier Belcore (based on another commedia figure, Il capitano, the Spanish captain). Rossini drew upon the Italian comedy more than once, in the Turkish-abduction scenario outlined in L’italiana in Algeri (also utilized in Mozart’s The Abduction from the Seraglio) and La Cenerentola in the characters of the helpful servant Dandini and the pompous father Don Magnifico (another personage from the commedia). Leoncavallo’s Pagliacci tells the story of a commedia dell’arte troupe and includes an actual performance of a traditional skit, the cuckolded husband, and Carlo Collodi managed to include the same plot and characters in his Le avventure di Pinocchio (most recently realized by composer Jonathan Dove). In the 20th century, we find the harlequinade in Puccini’s Turandot (renamed Ping, Pang and Pong), Richard Strauss’ Ariadne auf Naxos and Dominick Argento’s Casanova’s Homecoming. These examples, familiar to the Minnesota Opera’s repertoire, are only a few from a larger body of commedia dell’arte-inspired works of the operatic genre.

History of Opera

In the beginning …

JACOPO PERI 1561–1633
CLAUDIO MONTEVERDI 1567–1643

Although often considered an Italian innovation, opera had its debut in Ancient Greece, where drama frequently incorporated singing, declamation and dance to tell a narrative tale. Ecclesiastical music dramas of the Middle Ages were also important precursors. But the operatic art form familiar to us today has its roots in Florence, between 1580 and 1589, where a group of musicians, poets and scholars explored the possibility of reviving tragic drama of the ancients.

The circle was known as the camerata and consisted of writers, theorists and composers, including GIULIO CACCINI, OTTAVIO RINUCCINI and VINCENZO GALILEI (father of the famed astronomer). Their efforts exacted musical compositions that took special care to accentuate the dramatic inflection of their chosen text, to evoke its precise emotional shading and to find the ideal marriage between words and music. JACOPO PERI, a rival of Caccini and a collaborator with Rinuccini, produced the first known (but no longer existing) opera, Dafne, in 1597.

The Camerata met at the home of the nobleman GIOVANNI DE’ BARDI. Thus, no sooner had opera had made its first appearance than it became a court activity, which fit the social and political conditions of the day. As a result of Bardi’s influence, these composers were hired by the Grand Duke of Tuscany Ferdinand I, who gave them their first wide exposure. When his daughter, Marie de’ Medici, married Henry IV of France, Peri’s Euridice was produced at the ceremony, and Italian opera gained its first international premiere. Even though Euridice was a simply staged production accompanied by a small group of strings and flute, in 1600 this type of musical drama was considered revolutionary.

CLAUDIO MONTEVERDI’S Orfeo (1607) is the most significant opera of this period, more so than those works of the Florentines. The boldness of his harmonies and the richness of his orchestration dramatically developed the art form, and this work, along with L’incoronazione di Poppea (1642) are still popular pieces performed today.

Opera in Venice

FRANCESCO CAVALLI 1602–1676
ANTONIO CESTI 1623–1669

The new art form quickly spread to other Italian cities. By 1636, the first public opera house was opened in Venice and opera became quite popular among the people. Le nozze di Tese e di Pele, the first of FRANCESCO CAVALLI’s thirty-plus operas for the Venetian stage, premiered two years later. Competing with Monteverdi and ANTONIO CESTI (who took a post in Innsbruck after producing only two works for Venice), Cavalli quickly rose to the top.

At the same time, Italian stage designers were fast improving their techniques and were able to produce stupendous special effects, a happy coincidence for the new operatic art form. The use of the proscenium arch allowed the spectator to view the stage from a narrower angle, thus producing a better illusion of perspective. The proscenium also hid elaborate flying apparatus, and allowed for quick and seamless scene changes with drops from the top and flaps from the side wings. Spectacular stage effects became a speciality of French opera, and with the inclusion of ballet, became the part of established style of France by the 18th century.
North of Italy, Hamburg composer Reinhard Keiser (1694 – 1739) became the director of one of the first public opera houses in Germany. He often set libretti by Venetian librettists.

Baroque Opera in France, England and Germany

Jean-Baptiste Lully 1632–1687
Henry Purcell 1658/59–1695
George Frideric Handel 1685–1759
Christoph Willibald Gluck 1714–1787

In 1646, Giovanni Battista Lulli arrived in France from Florence and tried to establish Italian opera in the French Court. He was unsuccessful because the reigning monarch, Louis XIV, preferred dance. Nonetheless, Jean-Baptiste Lully, as he became known, rose in royal favor by composing ballets for the king and eventually gained control of the Académie Royale de Musique, the official musical institution of France. Through Lully’s influence in this important position, and by way of his own compositions, a distinctive French operatic form began to emerge and thrive on its own.

The Italian and French forms of opera were slow to catch on among the English, who preferred spoken theater. A compromise was reached in a form referred to as semi-opera, featuring spoken dialogue alternated with musical masques (which often included dance). Henry Purcell’s The Fairy Queen (1692) is one popular example from this period. Purcell’s first opera, Dido and Aeneas (1689), is his only opera in the Italian style and continues to be occasionally revived in modern times.

A major player in the early part of the 18th century was George Frideric Handel, who began his career in Hamburg. As early as 1711, Handel enjoyed success in England and would remain there for the next forty years. During that time, he wrote 35 operas (many in the Italian style), most of which focused on historical, classical or romantic subjects. His inventive musical style began to set new standards for the art form, and his works redefined the dramatic potential of opera as a vital and vivid experience.

Another German, Christoph Willibald Gluck, arrived in England on the heels of Handel’s last London operas, and later moving to Vienna, he began to see what he found to be flaws in the conventional Italian opera of the day. Singers had taken control of the productions, demanding solo arias and sometimes adding their own pieces to show off their vocal technique. Operas were turning into a collection of individual showpieces at the sacrifice of dramatic integrity. Although Gluck wrote some operas which shared these flaws, one work, Orfeo ed Euridice (1762), reasserted the primacy of drama and music.
by removing the da capo (repeated and embellished) part of the aria, by using chorus and instrumental solos only to reinforce the dramatic action, and by not allowing the singers to insert their own music. Gluck completed his career in Paris, where he became a master of French opera’s serious form, the tragédie lyrique.

During the 18th century, opera began to fall into two distinct categories: opera seria and opera buffa. Opera seria (serious opera) focused on historical, religious or Greco-Roman subjects. The glorification of saints, kings and gods went hand-in-hand with the grandiose baroque style and the spectacular stage effects of court opera. Librettist Pietro Metastasio provided 28 libretti that continued to serve composers again and again well into the 19th century. Opera buffa (comic opera) had its roots with the popular audience, each country specializing in its own distinct form. In France, Charles Simon Favart’s operas of the 1740s parodied the serious tragédie lyriques of Lully (the Opéra-Comique, the Paris theater for comic opera, would later be named after him). In Naples, Italy, the intermezzi (short comic works inserted in between acts of a serious opera), of Giovanni Battista Pergolesi paved the way to the development of opera buffa in the latter half of the 18th century. His masterpiece, La serva padrona (1733), is considered a milestone in the development of comic opera.

Opera during the Classical Period

Giuseppe Sarti 1729–1802
Franz Joseph Haydn 1732–1809
Giovanni Paisiello 1740–1816
Domenico Cimarosa 1749–1801
Antonio Salieri 1750–1825
Vicente Martin y Soler 1754–1806
Wolfgang Amadeus Mozart 1756–1791

Two composers are invariably linked to the Classical Period – Franz Joseph Haydn and Wolfgang Amadeus Mozart. Of the former, few of his operas are produced today even though he wrote over 25, most of which were created and performed for his employer, Prince Nikolaus Esterházy. Mozart’s operas, however, remain in repertory as some of the most frequently produced works. Of the five most favorite – The Abduction from the Seraglio (1782), The Marriage of Figaro (1786), Don Giovanni (1787), Cosi fan tutte (1790), The Magic Flute (1791) – two are singspiels (a popular German form, replacing sung recitative with spoken dialogue), two opera buffas and one opera “semi-seria.” Two opera serias (the form Mozart preferred, incidently) frame his adult career – Idomeneo (1781) was his first mature opera and La clemenza di Tito (1791) was his last commission.

Lesser composers of this period include Antonio Salieri (born in Legnago, settling later in Vienna), who served the court of Emperor Joseph II. Through the emperor’s influence with his sister, Marie Antoinette, Salieri made headway in Paris as well, establishing himself as a worthy successor of Gluck in the serious vein of his tragédie lyriques. Returning to Vienna in 1784, Salieri found himself in strict
After the Revolution – French Grand Opera

LUIGI CHERUBINI 1760–1842
FERDINANDO PAER 1771–1839
GASPARE SPONTINI 1774–1851
DANIEL-FRANÇOIS-ESPRIT AUBER 1782–1871
GIACOMO MEYERBEER 1791–1864

In the decades following the French revolution, French grand opera developed extensively, moving from a private entertainment for royalty to an art form eagerly consumed by the upwardly mobile bourgeoisie. Opera in France at the turn of the 19th century was dominated by expatriate Italian composers. First and most notable was Luigi Cherubini, who established residence in Paris in 1785. Eventually rising to the position of director of the national conservatory, he virtually ceased composing operas in 1813. The most lasting work in his oeuvre is Médée of 1797.

Ferdinando Paer came to prominence during the first empire of Napoleon I – he was engaged as the Emperor’s maître de chapelle in 1807 and later became the director of the Opéra-Comique. Just before Napoleon’s abdication, Paer assumed directorship of the Théâtre Italien, a post he held until it was yielded to Rossini in 1824. None of his many operas survive in the modern repertory, although the libretto he wrote for one, Leonora (1804), served to inspire Ludwig van Beethoven’s only opera, Fidelio (1805). Gaspare Spontini was another Italian who moved to Paris and eventually ran the Théâtre Italien, a theater devoted to producing Italian works in their native language. Most popular among his repertoire were La Vestale (1807) and Fernand Cortez (1809).

French grand opera came into its own through the efforts of two composers: Daniel-François-Esprit Auber and Giacomo Meyerbeer. Collaborating with Eugène Scribe (whose plays would later serve as inspiration for a number of Verdi operas), Auber produced La muette de Portici (1828), the first definite grand opéra of this period, which proved extremely popular with French audiences. Characteristic of the genre was a five-act framework that incorporated spectacular stage effects, large crowd scenes and a ballet. A specific, mannered formula for the drama’s unfolding was also inherent in the art form.

Meyerbeer brought grand opera to fruition first with Robert le diable (1831), then with Les Huguenots (1836), and with these works, also established a close relationship with Scribe. Two later works of note include La prophète (1849) and L’Africaine (1865), also cast in the grand opera schema.
Early 19th-century Italy – The Bel Canto composers

GIOACHINO ROSSINI 1792–1868
GAETANO DONIZETTI 1797–1848
VINCENZO BELLINI 1801–1835

Back in Italy, opera saw the development of a distinctive style known as bel canto. Bel canto (literally “beautiful singing”) was characterized by the smooth emission of tone, beauty of timbre and elegance of phrasing. Music associated with this genre contained many trills, roulades and other embellishments that showed off the particular singer’s technique. Traditionally, a bel canto aria begins with a slow, song-like cantabile section followed by an intermediate mezzo section with a slightly quicker tempo. It ends with a dazzling cabaletta, the fastest section, where the singer shows off his or her talents. Often these were improvised upon, or replaced with “suitcase” arias of the singers’ own choosing, much to the consternation of the composer.

GIOACHINO ROSSINI was the first and perhaps best known of the three composers associated with this style. In his early years, between 1813 and 1820, Rossini composed rapidly, producing two or three operas a year. The pace slowed after he moved to France in 1824 – there he produced five works for the Paris Opéra, several of which show tendencies of the French grand opera style. William Tell was his last opera – Rossini retired at age 37 with 39 more years to live.

GAETANO DONIZETTI and VINCENZO BELLINI were two other Italian Bel Canto composers who premiered operas in both Paris and Italy. A tendency that began with Rossini and continued into their works was the practice of accompanied recitatives. Opera to this point had been organized in a very specific manner with more elongated “numbers” (arias, duets, ensembles) alternated with recitative (essentially dialogue set to music, intended to move the action along). In Mozart’s day, these recitative would be played by a harpsichord or fortepiano (sometimes doubled with cellos and basses) and was known as recitativo secco. As Rossini’s style progressed, the orchestra took over playing the recitatives which became known as recitativo accompagnato. The practice continued into Verdi’s day.
Three Masters of Opera

GIUSEPPE VERDI 1813–1901
RICHARD WAGNER 1813–1883
GIACOMO PUCCINI 1858–1924

Giuseppe Verdi’s roots began in bel canto but the composer transformed the Italian style into a more fluid, less structured form. With a legacy of 26 operas, Verdi is never out of the repertory and four of these (Rigoletto, 1851; Il trovatore, 1853; La traviata, 1853; Aida, 1871) are some of the most familiar of the art form.

Verdi’s contemporary, Richard Wagner, is also considered one of the greats. Taking the idea of “fluidity” one step further, Wagner developed his operas into freely flowing music-dramas united by melodic motifs that become associated with persons, places and things. Taking the grandeur of French opera one step further, he crafted his own libretti out of Nordic legends and created spectacular operatic moments. Wagner also greatly expanded the orchestra and developed his own particular brass instruments for greater impact. A Wagnerian singer is one with great stamina – they must sing over a large orchestra in an opera that can be up to four hours long.

Italian opera’s successor to Verdi turned out to be Giacomo Puccini. With a gift of popular melody and musical economy, his operas La bohème (1896), Tosca (1900) and Madame Butterfly (1904) remain at the top of the standard repertory.
Later French Opera

HECTOR BERLIOZ 1803–1869
CHARLES-FRANÇOIS GOUNOD 1818–1893
JACQUES OFFENBACH 1819–1880
EDOUARD LALO 1823–1892
CAMILLE SAINT-SAËNS 1835–1921
LÉO DELIBES 1836–1891
GEORGES BIZET 1838–1875
JULES MASSNEDET 1842–1912
GUSTAVE CHAPENTIER 1860–1956

The grand opera schema continued into the latter half of the 19th century in such works as HECTOR BERLIOZ’s Les Troyens (composed 1856–58), and CHARLES-FRANÇOIS GOUNOD’s Faust (1859) and Roméo et Juliette (1867). An element of realism began to slip into the French repertoire, seen in works by GEORGES BIZET (Carmen, 1875) and GUSTAVE CHAPENTIER (Louise, 1897). JACQUES OFFENBACH revolutionized the art of comic operetta in such works as Orphée aux enfers (1858), La belle Hélène (1864) and La Périchole (1868). Other composers of this period include CAMILLE SAINT-SAËNS (Samson et Dalila, 1877), EDOUARD LALO (Le Roi d’Ys, 1875) and JULES MASSNEDET (Manon, 1884; Werther, 1892; Cendrillon, 1899).

Verismo in Late 19th-century Italy

RUGGERO LEONCAVALLO 1857–1919
PIETRO MASCAGNI 1863–1945
UMBERTO GIORDANO 1867–1948

A realist vein began to penetrate Italian opera toward the end of the 19th century, influenced in part by naturalism in French literature of the period and by the writings of an Italian literary circle, the SCAPILGIATURA. Translated as the “dishevelled ones,” the Scapigliatura displayed their distaste for bourgeois society in works of gritty realism, often bordering on the morbid and the macabre. Nearly all the members of the group (lead by GIOVANNI VERGA) led tragic lives ending in early death by alcoholism and suicide.
Operas to come out of the resulting verismo school include Pietro Mascagni's Cavalleria rusticana (1890), Ruggero Leoncavallo's Pagliacci (1892) and Umberto Giordano's Mala vita (1892). Other works are attributed to this movement by nature of their rapid action with passionate tension and violence quickly alternating with moments of great sentimentality.

Opera was introduced in Russia during the succession of powerful czarinas that culminated in the reign of Catherine the Great (ruled 1762 – 1796). She employed a number of important Italian composers (see above) and established St. Petersburg as a major city for the production of new opera, later to be elevated to the same par as London, Paris and Vienna by her descendant, Nicholas I (ruled 1825 – 1855). Of native Russian composers, the first to come to prominence was Mikhail Glinka with A Life for the Tsar (1836), and later, Ruslan and Lyudmila (1842). Pyotr Tchaikovsky, now known more for his ballets and symphonies, was a prolific composer of opera. His best works include Eugene Onegin (1879), Mazepa (1884) and The Queen of Spades (1890). Other Russian composers of the latter 19th century include Nikolay Rimsky-Korsakov (The Snow Maiden, 1882; The Tsar's Bride, 1899; The Golden Cockerel, 1909) and Modest Mussorgsky (Boris Godunov, 1874).

Russian opera continued into the 20th century with works by Sergei Prokofiev composed The Love for Three Oranges (1921) and The Gambler (1929), among others. His crowning achievement, written toward the end of his life, was War and Peace (1948), based on the novel by Leo Tolstoy. Dmitri Shostakovich's most notable work is Lady Macbeth of the Mtsensk District (1934). Both artists suffered censure from the Soviet government.

Claude Debussy’s impressionist score for Pelléas et Mélisande (1902) paved the way for the radical changes in 20th-century opera. Also based on a Symbolist text by Maurice Maeterlinck was Paul Dukas’ Ariane et Barbe-Bleue (1907), an opera about the notorious Bluebeard and his six wives. But causing the most sensation was Richard Strauss’ Salome (1905), which pushed both tonality and the demands on the singers to the limits. He followed that opera with an even more progressive work, Elektra (1909), drawn from the Greek tragedy by Sophocles.

Important innovations were taking place in Vienna. Arnold Schoenberg made a complete break with tonality in his staged monodrama Erwartung (1909), giving all twelve tones of the chromatic scale equal importance. He codified this approach in his twelve-tone system where a theme is created with a row of notes using all twelve notes of the chromatic scale. This “row” can be played in transposition, in reverse, upside-down, or in any combination of the three. Schoenberg also evolved a particular style of singing, sprechstimme, an intoned speech halfway between singing and speaking.

Sprechstimme was well suited to the expressionist nature of operas being produced at this time. Schoenberg’s student, Alban Berg, employed it in Wozzeck (1925) and used the serialized twelve-tone method in his opera Lulu (1937). Another avant-garde composer, Paul Hindemith, created a series of expressionist one-act operas that shocked audiences of the day: Murder, Hope of Women (1921), Das Nusch-Nuschi (1921) and Sancta Susanna (1922). Two later operas include one based on a short story by E.T.A. Hoffmann (Cardillac, 1926) and a satire on modern social behavior (News of the Day, 1929). At about the same time Kurt Weill was causing an uproar with his new works: The Threepenny Opera (1928), The Rise and Fall of the City of Mahagonny (1930) and Der Silbersee (1933). The up-and-coming Nazi party did not favor his works, and he was forced to leave the country, eventually to settle in America.

In Paris, Russian Igor Stravinsky was shocking audiences and causing riots with his ballet music. His early operas include The Nightingale (1914) and Mavra (1922). Oedipus Rex (1927) is representative of his first neoclassical works, using forms from the 18th century with modern tonality and orchestration. His later (and longest) opera, The Rake’s Progress (1951), is a culmination of this neoclassical style. French composer Darius Milhaud was extremely prolific in all genres of music. In opera, he produced the one-act Le pauvre matelot (1927) and a large-scale work in the tradition of grand opera, Christophe Columbe (1930). Later in his life he composed La mère coupable (1966), based on the Beaumarchais Figaro trilogy (which includes The Barber of Seville and The Marriage of Figaro).

In England, Benjamin Britten emerged as one of Britain’s foremost composers of opera since Henry Purcell. Out of his 16 original works for the stage the most popular include Peter Grimes (1945), Billy Budd (1951), Gloriana (1953) and The Turn of the Screw (1954).
Paris in the 20s served to inspire the next generation of composers, several of which were expatriates from America. George Antheil was the first American composer to have an opera premiered in Europe – his work, Transatlantic, was written in France but premiered in Frankfurt in 1930. Compatriot Virgil Thomson studied with famed teacher Nadia Boulanger and later produced Four Saints in Three Acts (1934) and The Mother of Us All (1947), both to texts by Gertrude Stein. Samuel Barber stayed on American soil, studying at the newly founded Curtis Institute in 1935. He went on to compose Vanessa (1958), and to open the new Metropolitan Opera House at Lincoln Center, Antony and Cleopatra (1966).

Other composers currently at the fore include Philip Glass, John Corigliano and John Adams. The Minimalist music of Philip Glass has won popular acclaim among even non-opera-going audiences – his oeuvre includes Einstein on the Beach (1976), Akhnaten (1984), and most recently, The Voyage (1992), commissioned by the Metropolitan Opera to commemorate the 500th anniversary of Columbus’ discovery of America. The Met also commissioned The Ghosts of Versailles from John Corigliano in 1991 – like Milhaud’s opera of 1966, its text involves Beaumarchais’ third part of the Figaro trilogy with the playwright himself appearing as the lover of 18th-century Queen of France Marie Antoinette.

Opera continues to be a living and vital art form in the revival of many of these works as well as the commissioning of new pieces. Among world premieres in the last two decades include Tobias Picker’s Emmeline (1996) by Santa Fe Opera, Daniel Catán’s Florentia en el Amazonas (1996) by Houston Grand Opera, Myron Fink’s The Conquistador (1997) presented by San Diego Opera, Anthony Davis’ Amistad (1997) presented by Lyric Opera of Chicago and Central Park (1999) by Glimmerglass Opera, a trilogy of short operas set by three composers. Recent seasons included such new works as Poul Ruders’ The Handmaid’s Tale (Royal Danish Opera; 2000), Bright Sheng’s Madame Mao (Santa Fe Opera; 2003), Daniel Catán’s Salsipuedes (Houston Grand Opera; 2004), Richard Danielpour’s Margaret Garner (Michigan Opera Theatre; 2005), Ricky Ian Gordon’s The Grapes of Wrath (Minnesota Opera; 2007), Jonathan Dove’s The Adventures of Pinocchio (Opera North, Leeds; 2008), Howard Shore’s The Fly (Los Angeles Opera; 2009), Jake Heggie’s Moby Dick (Dallas Opera; 2010), Kevin Puts’ Silent Night (Minnesota Opera; 2011) and Douglas J. Cuomo and John Patrick Shanley’s Doubt (Minnesota Opera; 2013).
Minnesota Opera combines a culture of creativity and fiscal responsibility to produce opera and opera education programs that expand the art form, nurture artists, enrich audiences and contribute to the vitality of the community.

Minnesota Opera’s roots were planted in 1963 when the Walker Art Center commissioned Dominick Argento to compose an opera (The Masque of Angels) for its performing arts program, Center Opera. Center Opera focused on the composition and performance of new works by American composers, and, under the influence of the Walker Art Center, emphasized visual design. The company grew steadily, and in 1969 became an independent entity, changing its name in 1971 to The Minnesota Opera.

Throughout the first 12 years of its history, The Minnesota Opera was known as a progressive, “alternative” opera production company, a complement to the traditional orientation of the annual Metropolitan Opera tour and the productions of the St. Paul Opera. In 1976, The Minnesota Opera merged with the St. Paul Opera, adding a focus on traditional repertory to its program of contemporary opera.

In January 1985, The Minnesota Opera entered a new era with the opening of the Ordway Center for the Performing Arts in St. Paul, one of the nation’s most respected performance halls. Today, the company presents its entire season at the Ordway.

In September 1990, the company moved its scenic and costume shops, rehearsal facilities and administrative offices to the 51,000 square-feet Minnesota Opera Center, which comprises three renovated warehouses on the Mississippi riverfront in Minneapolis. Winner of a 1990 Preservation Alliance of Minnesota Award, the Minnesota Opera Center is one of the finest opera production facilities in the nation and has served to strengthen the company both artistically and institutionally.

Throughout the 1990s, the company gained a national reputation for its high-quality, innovative productions of standard repertoire operas like Aida, Carmen and Turandot, which were seen on stages across the nation, and firmly established Minnesota Opera’s reputation as a lead coproducer in the industry. In that decade, Minnesota Opera also grew institutionally, launching an artistic development campaign to establish a foundation for the expansion of its season and increased artistic quality.

In 1997, the company launched its Resident Artist Program to bridge the gap between an artist’s academic training and their professional life on the world stage. The RAP is acclaimed for its exceptional, intense and individualized training as well as the elite group of young artists it produces. Alumni have earned engagements at prestigious houses such as the Metropolitan Opera, the Salzburg Festival and Covent Garden.

In 2000, Artistic Director Dale Johnson articulated a new artistic vision for the company inspired by bel canto (“beautiful singing”), the ideal upon which Italian opera is based. Bel canto values, which emphasize intense emotional expression supported by exquisite technique, inform every aspect of the company’s programs, from repertoire selection, casting and visual design to education and artist training. As one manifestation of its philosophy, Minnesota Opera is committed to producing one work from the early 19th-century Bel Canto period each season, attracting luminary singers like Bruce Ford, Vivica Genaux, Brenda Harris and Sumi Jo to its stage.
Minnesota Opera is also recognized for its progressive and far-reaching educational programs. Residencies in schools, opera education classes and pre-performance discussions are building an audience for tomorrow and enhancing the enjoyment of audiences today.

Throughout its history, Minnesota Opera has attracted international attention for its performances of new operas and innovative productions of masterworks. Among its most renowned world and American premieres are: Dominick Argento’s Postcard from Morocco, The Voyage of Edgar Allan Poe and Casanova’s Homecoming, William Mayer’s A Death in the Family, Libby Larsen’s Frankenstein, The Modern Prometheus, Oliver Knussen and Maurice Sendak’s Where the Wild Things Are, Conrad Susa’s Transformations and Black River, PDQ Bach’s The Abduction of Figaro, Robert Moran’s From the Towers of the Moon, Gioachino Rossini’s Armida, Evan Chen’s Bok Choy Variations, George Antheil’s Transatlantic, Poul Ruders’ The Handmaid’s Tale, Laurent Petitgirard’s Joseph Merrick dit Elephant Man, Saverio Mercadante’s Orazi e Curiazi, Ricky Ian Gordon’s The Grapes of Wrath, Reinhard Keiser’s The Fortunes of King Croesus, Jonathan Dove’s The Adventures of Pinocchio, Kevin Puts’ Pulitzer Prize-winning Silent Night and Douglas J. Cuomo’s Doubt.

Building on the legacy of its commitment to new work and following the overwhelming success of its commission of The Grapes of Wrath in 2007, Minnesota Opera launched the New Works Initiative, a landmark program designed to invigorate the operatic repertoire through the production and dissemination of new commissions and revivals of contemporary American works. The seven-year, $7 million program includes an international coproduction (The Adventures of Pinocchio, 2009), three revivals (Casanova’s Homecoming in 2010; Wuthering Heights in 2011 and a third to be announced) and three commissions (Silent Night in 2012; Doubt in 2013 and a third to be announced).

On the Minnesota Opera stage, talented national and internationally known artists are brought together to create productions of the highest artistic integrity, emphasizing the balance and total integration of theatrical and musical values. Throughout the past five decades, the company has presented such artists as Tim Albery, Isabel Bayrakdarian, John Lee Beatty, Harry Bicket, Richard Bonynge, William Burden, John Conklin, Roxana Constantinescu, David Daniels, Bruce Ford, Elizabeth Futral, Vivica Genaux, Colin Graham, Denyce Graves, Greer Grimsley, Nancy Gustafson, Brenda Harris, Jason Howard, Judith Howarth, Robert Indiana, Robert Israel, Sumi Jo, Kelly Kaduce, Antony McDonald, Catherine Malfitano, Daniel Massey, Johanna Meier, Suzanne Mentzer, Erie Mills, Sherrill Milnes, Julia Migenes, Fernando de la Mora, James Morris, Suzanne Murphy, Maureen O’Flynn, Susanna Phillips, Ashley Putnam, Patricia Racette, James Robinson, Neil Rosenshein, William Shimell, James Valenti, David Walker and Keith Warner.

Minnesota Opera, now the 13th largest opera company in the nation with an annual budget of $10.2 million (Fiscal Year 2012), is guided by President and General Director Kevin Ramch and Artistic Director Dale Johnson.

Today Minnesota Opera is enjoying unprecedented stability and unity of mission, working toward its vision to create a new, dynamic opera company model based upon innovation, world-class artistic quality and strong community service.

The Elements of Opera

Often called “all the arts in one” opera includes the Aristotelian elements of drama: theme, spectacle, plot, diction, movement and music. A production is truly successful only when these components work together. Many individuals are engaged to accomplish this purpose.

In the Beginning

A subject is selected by a composer. It may be mythical, biblical, historical, literary or based on current events. A librettist is employed to adapt the story into poetic verse and the composer then writes the music (or score).

The Opera Company

An opera company’s artistic director agrees to stage the work. In many cases, an opera has already been written and staged many times.

Casting

The opera company’s artistic director selects performers from auditions. These performers are divided into principals, compriarios (singers in secondary roles), choristers, and players for the orchestra. Often in a production, supernumeraries are employed (people who act but do not sing). Sometimes the opera has a ballet which requires dancers, or a banda which requires orchestra members to play on stage.

Sets and Costumes

A design team is assembled consisting of a stage director, set designer and costume designer. They agree on a visual concept for the opera and sets and costumes are created.

Administration

The company’s marketing department sells tickets and the development department raises funds through donations to cover the costs of the production. The finance department controls costs and balances the production’s budget. The education department prepares the audience for what they are going to see on stage.

Rehearsal

The production goes into rehearsal. Principals, choristers and the orchestra often rehearse separately until the director begins staging. The conductor of the orchestra attends staging rehearsals which are accompanied by a répétiteur, or rehearsal pianist. The orchestra joins the singers for the first time at the sitzprobe. During tech week, sets and lighting are put into place at the theater. Several dress rehearsals (with the performers in costume and the orchestra in the pit) occur before the first performance of the opera. Sometimes these rehearsals are attended by a select audience.
THE PREMIERE

The first presentation of the opera to the general public is known as the premiere. Long before the curtain goes up, preparations are being made.

6:00 PM  Continuity

STAGEHANDS (1) set the scenery for the first act of the production.

6:15 PM  Makeup calls

PRINCIPALS and  COMPRIAMOS (2) begin to arrive at the theater to be put into costume by DRESSES, then are wigged by the WIGMASTER (1A) and made up with theatrical makeup.

6:30 PM  House opens

OPERA patrons are admitted to the AUDITORIUM (4) and seated by USHERS (5). The HOUSE MANAGER (6) oversees the activities in the front of the house, including the ushers and concession sales. The BOX OFFICE MANAGER (7) takes care of any last minute ticket purchases. Patrons may remain in the LOBBY (8) to attend an informational session of OPERA Insights, led by the Opera’s music staff.

6:45 PM  Notes

The STAGE DIRECTOR may give last minute instructions to the cast before the performance begins.

7:00 PM  Warm-ups

PRINCIPALS and  COMPRIAMOS (2) warm-up in their dressing rooms.

7:15 PM  Chorus and orchestra warm-ups

The CHORUS (10), who have already put on their costumes, warms up with the CHORUSMASTER. The ORCHESTRA warms up in the ORCHESTRA PIT (11).

7:25 PM  Places

The PRODUCTION STAGE MANAGER (12) calls places. Two other STAGE MANAGERS (13) are posted stage left and stage right to cue the entrances of the singers and choristers.

7:28 PM  Orchestra tune

The principal oboe gives a concert “A” to which the ORCHESTRA tunes. The SURTITLE PROMPTER (15) cues the preshow titles. The CONDUCTOR shakes the CONCERTMASTER’S hand and mounts the podium.

7:30 PM  Curtain

The house lights go out, and the FLYMAN (1A) raises the CURTAIN (16). The show begins.

8:25 PM  Intermission

The audience returns to the LOBBY (8) for refreshments while the STAGEHANDS (1) reset the STAGE (14) for the next act.

10:15 PM  Curtain calls

The performance ends, and the STAGE DIRECTOR, DESIGNERS, CONDUCTOR and SINGERS get to take a bow for all their hard work.

STAGEHANDS move scenery and props and handle lighting. DRESSERS help the cast into their often elaborate costumes.

PRINCIPALS sing the major roles, COMPRIAMOS sing minor named roles. CHORISTERS make up the rest of the singing cast and are prepared by the CHORUSMASTER.

The CONDUCTOR leads the orchestra. The STAGE DIRECTOR instructs the cast where to move onstage. He or she generally stays only for the PREMIERE.

The ORCHESTRA rehearses several times independently from the singers. The first rehearsal during which singers and orchestra perform together is called a SITZPROBE. The CONCERTMASTER is the first violin and is responsible for “bowing” the string parts so the performers all move their bows together.

The PRODUCTION STAGE MANAGER “calls” the show, announcing entrance and lighting cues. Two other STAGE MANAGERS assist in getting the cast and chorus on and off the stage. The SURTITLE PROMPTER cues the English translations projected above the stage from the control booth.
The Elements of Opera – The Singers

The most important part of the opera is the singers. They are categorized into six different voice types.

THE SOPRANO
High-voiced woman. Voted “Most Likely to Die Before the Curtain Goes Down.” Putty in the hands of the tenor, baritone and occasionally even the mezzo (especially if she is in pants).

THE MEZZO-SOPRANO
Middle- to lower-voiced woman. Nobody’s pawn. May hook up with the baritone, unless she’s playing a young man, in which case she usually gets the soprano.

THE CONTRALTO
Lowest-voiced woman. Usually the mother, maid or duenna (an older woman charged with monitoring the virtue of the impressionable soprano). Generally the contralto calls herself a mezzo in order to get more work.

THE TENOR
High-voiced man. Whether comic or tragic, most often the misunderstood romantic role. Often kill themselves; almost always get the girl.

THE BASS AND BARITONE
Middle- to lowest-voiced man. Usually the bad guy, the father or guardian, or the hero’s best friend. If he hooks up with another singer, it’s usually a mezzo.

THE FAT LADY
There is no fat lady in helmet and horns—that is a myth. It ain’t over till the curtain goes down for the last time and everyone around you is clapping.

CABALETTA
A fast, contrasting short aria sung at the close of or shortly following a slower aria (called a cantabile, often for vocal effect only but sometimes dramatically motivated).

CADENCE
A resting place or close of a passage of music, clearly establishing tonality.

CADENZA
An elaborate passage near the end of an aria, which shows off the singer’s vocal ability.

CAMERATA
A group of musicians, poets and scholars who met in Florence in 1600 and created opera.

CANTILENA
Originally a little song, but now generally referring to smooth cantabile (It: ‘singable,’ or ‘singing’) passages.

CAVATINA
Originally an aria without a repeated section. Later used casually in place of aria.

CHORUS
A group of singers (called choristers) who portray townspeople, guests or other unnamed characters; also refers to the music written for these people.

CHORUS MASTER
Person who prepares the chorus musically (which includes rehearsing and directing them).

CLAQUE
A group attending performances in the larger opera houses and paid by leading singers to encourage and direct applause (a member of which is a claqueur).

COLORATURA
A voice that can sing music with many rapid notes, or the music written for such a voice.

COMMEDIA DELL’ARTE
Masked comedy or improvised Italian comedy of the sixteenth, seventeenth, and eighteenth centuries. A popular theatrical form with a sketched-out plot and stock characters, a pair of lovers without masks surrounded by comedians—Arlecchino, Brighella, Pantalone, Dottore, etc. Some of Mozart’s and Rossini’s operas retain the vestiges of these characters. Strauss, Busoni, and other recent composers have deliberately used them.

COMPRA MIO
A small singing role, often a servant or other minor character.

CONDUCTOR
The person who supervises all musical detail, rehearsals and leads the orchestra and advises the artistic director about the hiring of singers and musical staff (also called the music director).

CONTRALTO
The lowest female singing voice.

COUNTER TENOR
The highest natural male voice, not a castrato. True male altos may be heard in choirs. The term falsettist is sometimes used but disputed.

CYCLOrama
A curved curtain or wall enclosing the playing area of the stage and hiding the work areas behind it.

DA CAPO
(It: ‘from the top, or back to the beginning’). A familiar direction in music. A da capo aria of the Baroque period repeats the first part of the aria, with different embellishments, after the singing of a contrasting second part.

DESIGNER
The person who creates the lighting, costumes or sets.

DIAPHRAGM
The muscle which separates the chest cavity from the abdominal cavity. It is used by singers for breath control and it allows them to “project” their voices to the back of the auditorium.

DIRECTOR
The person who instructs the singer/actors in their movements on stage and in the interpretation of their roles.

DOWNSTAGE
The front of the stage nearest the audience.

DRAME LYRIQUE
(It: dramma lirico). Modern term for opera, not necessarily of a lyrical character. The English term “lyrical drama” is used in the same way.
Dramma per musica  A term that refers to text expressly written to be set by a composer and by extension also to the composition. The term was the one most commonly used for serious Italian opera in the 18th century (as opposed to the modern term opera seria, with which it is in effect interchangeable).

Duet  Music written for two people to play or sing together.

Embellishment  Decoration or ornament. A grace-note addition to the vocal line (also instrumental) of any kind, a four-note turn, or a trill.

Ensemble  Three or more people singing at the same time, or the music written for such a group.

Falsetto  The falsetto voice is of high pitch and produced by the vibrations of only one part of the vocal folds. The normal male voice sounds strained and effeminate in falsetto, but a natural alto or high tenor can produce effective vocal sound by this method. It is a singing mannerism to produce high tenor notes in falsetto.

Festa teatrale  (It.: ‘theatrical celebration’). A title applied to a dramatic work. Feste teatrali fall into two quite distinct classes: opera and serenatas.

Finale  The last musical number of an opera, or of an act of an opera.

Fioritura  (It: ‘flowering’, ‘flourish’; plural fioriture). When a composition for the voice contains decorative writing such as scales, arpeggios, trills and gruppetti (the groups of notes sometimes known in English as ‘turns’), it is described as ‘florid’ and the decorations themselves will be described collectively as ‘fioritura’. It is a more accurate term than ‘coloratura’, which is frequently used as an alternative.

Flats  Stretched canvas and wood panels on which scenery is painted.

Flies  The space above a stage where scenery is “flown” when not in use. A counterweight system simplifies raising and lowering flats, larger set pieces, and back drops.

Full Dress Rehearsal  The final rehearsal before opening night with all singers present in full costume.

Grand Opera  Traditionally, a serious epic or historical work in four or five acts which makes extensive use of the chorus and also includes a ballet. Also contains magnificent special effects.

Grid  Gridiron. Framework from which lines are hung and battens attached for the “flying” of scenery. The grid is situated high in the flies just beneath the ceiling of the fly loft.

Handlung für Musik  (Ger: ‘action in music’). Term used by Wagner to describe the libretto for Lohengrin and Tristan und Isolde; it has occasionally been used since.

Interlude  A short piece of instrumental music played between scenes or acts to fill in delays brought about by scenery changes.

Intermezzo  An instrumental interlude played between acts, or short two-act comic opera played between the acts of an opera seria.

Leitmotiv  A recurring musical figure used to identify a person, event or idea.

Legato  A smooth, flowing line. In vocal music it demands steadiness of emission and a sensitivity to phrasing.

Libretto  The words of an opera.
MASKING: A scenic frame or device to prevent the audience from seeing into the wings of the stage. Door and window openings are usually masked, often with realistic backings.

MASQUE: An entertainment popular in the late sixteenth century and throughout the seventeenth. A form of “total theater,” it combined music, scenic splendor, poetry, and some drama. Milton’s Comus, with music by Henry Lawes, is the most celebrated.

MELODRAMA: A basically serious play, frequently using comedy for relief, it only outwardly resembles tragedy. The conflicts and calamities are more interesting in themselves than are the characters, who tend to be stereotyped, good and bad. Passion, excitement, and action, often unmotivated, are emphasized. Intended for undiscriminating audiences, it uses much music to stimulate the emotions and much scenic effect to please the eye.

MÉLODrame: In addition to being the French word for melodrama, this term refers to a technique, which became popular during the eighteenth century, of playing orchestral music under or between the phrases of spoken dialogue.

MELODRAMMA: Dramma per musica (drama for music) and Melodramma (sung drama) antedate by many years the term opera, now in general use for works of this kind.

MEZZA VOCE: Half-voice, with reference to a passage required to be sung softly throughout. A similar term, messa di voce, has the different meaning of beginning a tone softly, swelling it gradually, and then softening it again.

MEZZO-SOPRANO: The middle female singing voice, lower than soprano but higher than contralto.

MOTIVE: A short musical idea on which a melody is based.

MUSICAL PLAY: A convenient but inexact designation which has become popular in English-speaking countries to distinguish the more ambitious works in the popular field of lyric theater from (a) European operetta or imitations thereof, (b) musical comedy of the vaudevillian sort, and (c) opera, especially in New York where the form is supposed to belong to the Metropolitan and the New York City Opera Company and is somewhat provincially considered “poison at the box office.” David Ewen regards Show Boat, 1927, as the first work of the new genre, the musical play. By the 1930s, this term had become a catchall.

OPERA: A term now used to cover musical-dramatic pieces of all kinds except musical comedy and operetta, although comic opera comes very close to these forms. The seventeenth-century Italian term for opera was Dramma per musica or Melodramma.

OPERA BURFA: A precise Italian definition, meaning Italian comic opera of the eighteenth and early nineteenth centuries. Musical numbers are strung along a continuum of dry recitative.

OPÉRA COMIQUE: French light opera of the eighteenth and nineteenth centuries. Strictly speaking, any theater piece written with spoken dialogue between the musical numbers (Faust, Carmen, and Manon) whether a comedy or not. The Paris Opéra Comique is also called the Salle Favart and was originally the home of all works using spoken dialogue, while the Opéra confined itself to through-composed works.

OPERA SERIA: Literally “serious opera.” An opera form of the seventeenth and early eighteenth centuries which uses historical, biblical or mythological subjects with a focus on revenge, danger and death.
Operetta
A loosely used term, often used interchangeably with comic opera, opéra bouffe, and musical comedy. In Italian it originally meant “little opera,” a short, light musical work. It has come to mean a full-length piece on a light subject, with musical numbers and spoken dialogue, and characterized by ingratiating tunes, decorative dances, colorful settings, social irresponsibility, a slender dramatic line, and the requirement of at least two well-trained voices.

Oratorio
A musical-dramatic work originating in the twelfth century, now generally performed, in contradistinction to opera, without action, costumes, and scenery. They are invariably associated with sacred subjects.

Orchestra Pit
The sunken area in front of the stage where the orchestra sits.

Overture
An orchestral introduction to the opera, usually played before the acting begins.

Parlando
(It: ‘in speaking style’). An informal and realistic technique occasionally used in Italian opera, bringing singing close to speaking.

Portamento
An Italian singing term, asking the voice to glide from one note to another at some distance. An authentic and effective device, to be distinguished from the mannerism of scooping.

Principal
A major singing role, or the singer who performs such a role.

Proscenium
The stage opening, resembling a three-sided picture frame. Immediately behind it and concealing the acting areas is the curtain. The proscenium arch was originally created in the 1700s to conceal the machinery used to create special stage effects.

Quartet
Four singers, or the music written for that group.

Recitative
Musical singing in the rhythm of speech.

Recitativo
A sung passage with orchestral accompaniment, lacking the formality of an aria, yet more declamatory and agitated than recitativo secco.

Recitativo secco
Dry recitative. A sung passage so close to everyday speech that although the pitches and time values are respected, a conversational quality prevails. A keyboard instrument generally supplies the sketchy accompaniment. Commonly used in Italian opera seria and opera buffa.

Repertory
A system of stage production in which a number of works are played, virtually in rotation, by a resident company throughout a season.

Répétition
French term for “rehearsal.” A répétition générale is a dress rehearsal to which critics and guests are invited.

Revolve
Revolving stage. Turntable. A section of the stage floor (permanently established) or a circular construction on a central pivot which revolves, to change scenery or supply movement of objects as well as people.

Ritornello
A short instrumental piece, literally meaning repetition or refrain. In Monteverdi’s works it usually consists of a few bars played between the verses of a strophic song.

Rococo
In art, associated with the late Baroque period and the late eighteenth century. In contrast to the dignity, heaviness, and occasional pomposity of Baroque, Rococo art is playful, lighter in tone and color, and adorned with scrolls, acorns, and shells.

Role
The character that a singer portrays.
ROMANTICISM The movement strongly associated with nineteenth-century Germany, but felt through all Europe and responsible for far-reaching changes in all forms of art. Rebels against the establishment (which was founded on a deep respect for the classics), the romanticists opposed authority and advocated freedom from formal regulations. They encouraged a subjective, strongly emotional approach as an antidote to classical decorum.

SCORE The music of an opera or other musical work in which the parts for different performers appear vertically above one another.

SCRIM A thin curtain, often painted. When lit from behind, one can see through it.

SERENATA A dramatic cantata, normally celebratory or eulogistic in intent, for two or more singers with orchestral accompaniment. In dramaturgical respects the serenata most closely resembles the Baroque oratorio.

SINFONIA A symphonic work the precedes an opera (English: overture); a shorter version is referred to as a prelude.

SINGSPIEL A German form of comic opera with spoken dialogue.

SITZPROBE A sit-down rehearsal where the performers sing with the orchestra for the first time.

SOPRANO The highest female singing voice.

SPRECHSTIMME A form of declamation halfway between speech and song. Instead of exactly notated pitch an approximation is given. The time, however, is given exactly and the singer is not allowed absolute license. Notations up and down are also meant to be respected. This style of singing is found in the works of Schoenberg and Berg.

STAGE LEFT The left side of the stage from the performer’s perspective as s/he faces the audience.

STAGE RIGHT The right side of the stage from the performer’s perspective as s/he faces the audience.

STRETTA An accelerated passage at the end of an aria, scene, or act.

TENOR The highest male singing voice.

TESSITURA Literally “texture.” The approximate range of a role or an aria.

THROUGH-COMPOSED Through-composed opera is a continuous music drama uninterrupted by spoken dialogue or obviously recognizable recitative.

TRAGÉDIE LYRIQUE A French term associated mainly with Lully and Rameau. Tragédie lyrique comes somewhat closer to the spoken play in dramatic expressiveness than does the Italian opera seria of the same period, which may exceed it in vocal expressiveness.

TRILL A musical ornament requiring the rapid alternation of two adjacent notes.

TROUSER ROLE Also called “pants role.” The part of a male character sung by a woman, usually a mezzo-soprano.

UNDERSTUDY A replacement for a particular role in case of illness or emergency (also called a “cover”).

VERISMO A type of late nineteenth and early twentieth-century Italian opera that emphasized realistic subjects.

WANDELPROBE Musical rehearsal which allows the conductor to hear what the singers sound like when they perform on the set.

WINGS The sides of the stage where the performers wait before making their entrances.
