Minnesota OPERA

620 North First Street, Minneapolis, MN 55401

Kevin Ramach, President and General Director
Dale Johnson, Artistic Director

Dear Educator,

Thank you for using a Minnesota Opera Opera Box. This collection of material has been designed to help any educator to teach students about the beauty of opera. This collection of material includes audio and video recordings, scores, reference books and a Teacher's Guide.

The Teacher's Guide includes Lesson Plans that have been designed around the materials found in the box and other easily obtained items. In addition, Lesson Plans have been aligned with State and National Standards. See the Unit Overview for a detailed explanation.

Before returning the box, please fill out the Evaluation Form at the end of the Teacher's Guide. As this project is new, your feedback is imperative. Comments and ideas from you – the educators who actually use it – will help shape the content for future boxes. In addition, you are encouraged to include any original lesson plans. The Teacher's Guide is intended to be a living reference book that will provide inspiration for other teachers. If you feel comfortable, include a name and number for future contact from teachers who might have questions regarding your lessons and to give credit for your original ideas. You may leave lesson plans in the Opera Box or mail them in separately.

Before returning, please double check that everything has been assembled. The deposit money will be held until I personally check that everything has been returned (i.e. CDs having been put back in the cases). Payment may be made to the Minnesota Opera Education Department. All forms of payment are accepted.

Since opera is first and foremost a theatrical experience, it is strongly encouraged that attendance at a performance of an opera be included. The Minnesota Opera offers Student Matinees and discounted group rate tickets to regular performances. It is hoped that the Opera Box will be the first step into exploring opera, and attending will be the next.

I hope you enjoy these materials and find them helpful. If I can be of any assistance, please feel free to call or e-mail me any time.

Sincerely,

Jamie Andrews
Community Education Director

Opera Box Lesson Plans with Related Standards

The lessons in this Teacher Guide are aligned with the current Minnesota Academic Standards, Arts K–12, and the National Standards for Music Education. It is not the intention of these lessons to completely satisfy the standards. This list only suggests how the standards and lesson objectives relate to each other.

Minnesota Academic Standards, Arts K–12

The Minnesota Academic Standards in the Arts set the expectations for achievement in the arts for K–12 students in Minnesota. The standards are organized by grade band (K–3, 4–5, 6–8, 9–12) into four strands that foster the development of students' artistic literacy.

The strands are as follows:

1. Artistic Foundations
2. Artistic Process: Create or Make
3. Artistic Process: Perform or Present, and
4. Artistic Process: Respond or Critique.

Each strand has one or more standards that can be implemented in the arts areas of dance, media arts, music, theater and/or visual arts. The benchmarks for the standards in each arts area are designated by a five-digit code. In reading the coding, please note that for code 0.3.1.5.2, the 0 refers to refers to the 0–3 (K–3) grade band, the 3 refers to the Artistic Process: Perform or Present strand, the 1 refers to the first (and only) standard for that strand, the 5 refers to the fifth arts area (visual arts), and the 2 refers to the second benchmark for that standard.

See the Minnesota Department of Education website for more information: education.state.mn.us/mde

Madame Butterfly

This is a chart that coordinates each track or chapter number for the CDs and DVDs in the Opera Box. The chart shows where each excerpt is in relation to the other recordings and where to find each section in the scores.

*Please note that there are three editions of Madame Butterfly. The full and vocal scores are of the Paris edition as are both CDs and both DVDs. The libretto is the 1907 Italian edition of the Paris score. Also, the VOX Classics CD also contains the La Scala and Brescia versions of the score. If you use the VOX Classics CD, be aware of what version you are using (*TRACK 4/1 would be CD 4, TRACK 1*).*

title of lesson

Lesson 1: Puccini: Master of Italian Opera

objective(s)

Students will learn about the significance of Puccini as a master composer of Italian opera.

material(s)

- Reference books about Puccini (The Complete Operas of Puccini; Puccini and His Operas)
- Puccini: Master of Italian Opera* Timeline Research Checklist
- General reference books about 19th-century Europe (specifically Italy) {not in Opera Box}
- Internet access {not in Opera Box}
- Poster board {not in Opera Box}

procedure(s)

(1) Divide class into groups. Assign research topics to each group related to Puccini. Direct the class to research their specific topics and prepare a presentation for the rest of the class based on their findings. The nature and scope of the presentations is at the discretion of the teacher.

Suggested topics:
– political and social culture of Italy during Puccini's lifetime (1858–1924)
– scientific and technological achievements during Puccini's lifetime.
– social life and class divisions in Italy and Europe during Puccini's lifetime.
– artistic and musical life in Italy and Europe between 1858–1924.
~ the rise in verismo opera
~ literary and artistic trends

(2) Offer some guided (in-class) research time with students. Depending on students' ability to conduct research, additional guidance might be needed.

(3) Each group is to create a piece of the timeline poster that will be posted on the wall. It is suggested that the teacher predetermine what form the timeline will look like. For example, cut pieces of poster board, mark the time span and topic of each section and mount final piece on the classroom wall. Each piece of the timeline should contain 20 facts.

(4) Student groups will give oral presentations on their topic. Each group should create five questions about their topic that they feel are the most important. Questions are to be submitted to the teacher prior to giving the presentation. The rest of the class should take notes on each presentation for a class-constructed test.

(5) Put all questions together from each group and give test.

assessment(s)

Assign value for class participation and group cooperation. In addition, assign value to each of the following activities:
– demonstration of checklist completed
– correct number of facts, clearly written, for piece of timeline
– all group members participating in presentation
– evidence of note-taking during all presentations

Lesson 2: Discovering Japanese Culture

objective(s)

Students will understand cultural differences between America and Japan.

material(s)

- Libretto Madame Butterfly
- dvd Madame Butterfly [Huang/Troxell – sony classical dvd is recommended]
- Discovering Japanese Culture* Checklist {see following page}
- Research materials about Japan {not in Opera Box}
  – Internet – Reference books

procedure(s)

(1) As a class, watch Act 1 of Madame Butterfly (Huang/Troxell dvd, chapters 2–6). Encourage the students to pay close attention to the mannerism of Pinkerton and Sharpless (the Americans) and Goro, Suzuki and Cio-Cio-San/Butterfly (the Japanese).

(2) Discuss as a class how the differences and similarities were created n stage. Examples could be the clothing worn, physical gestures (bowing, raising the hands, position of the upper body) and facial expressions. Create a list of these differences and similarities. {It is interesting to note that this opera was composed by an Italian who never traveled to Japan.}

(3) In groups or individually, students are to research Japanese culture and society circa 1900. Suggested topics:

– clothing
– social manners and customs
– role of women in the family
– geishas
– marriage and religion in Japanese society

Give each group the Discovering Japanese Culture* Checklist to assist in organizing their research (see next page).

(4) With this information they will develop a group presentation with the rest of the class serving as the audience. Each presenting group is to create five questions based on the most important points from their presentation. Collect all questions from every group and administer them as the final evaluation. Every member of each group needs to participate in the presentation.

assessment(s)

Value will be given for class participation, ability to work alone and/or in a group. Assign point value for the completion of the Discovering Japanese Culture* Checklist. Also give value for the quality of the presentation.

LESSON PLAN

TITLE OF LESSON

Lesson 3: "That was a great performance and I know why!"

OBJECTIVE(S)

Students will learn to critically analyze elements of operatic performance.

MATERIAL(S)

- DVD of Madame Butterfly (Huang/Troxell/Sony Classical DVD)
- "That was a great performance and I know why!" Rubric {see following page}
- Reviews from newspapers (theater, movie, television, etc.) {not in Opera Box}

PROCEDURE(S)

(1) Have students find theater, movie and/or television reviews from newspaper or television and bring for class discussion. Suggested discussion topics:
   – Ask students about the quality of these reviews.
   – Do the students find them helpful?
   – Do they influence if they will attend a performance? Why or why not?

   Suggest that the writers and readers both must settle on a set of criteria for the review to be successful regardless if the reader takes the reviewer's stance or not.

(2) As a class, analyze the criteria on which that the reviewer based the article. For example, what did the reviewer site as a good or bad example of the event? Was there mention of the quality of the production? The comments given reflect what is determined to be important in an opera performance.

(3) Students are to create a chart listing the criteria to be used in reviewing an excerpt of Madame Butterfly. The chart should be set up as a rubric with a mixture of criteria that includes musical and production elements. Criteria can be picked from the following:
   – Musical criteria-singing, staging, acting, conductor, orchestra, chorus, soloists
   – Production criteria-sets, costumes, lighting

(4) Show a DVD excerpt of Act I from Madame Butterfly (Huang/Troxell – Sony Classics DVD), chapters 1–5, and have students evaluate the performance based on their criteria listed on their chart. Discuss the students' responses.

(5) Students are to write a review of a live performance of Madame Butterfly.

ASSESSMENT(S)

Value will be given to class participation, quality of written review and depth of analysis from their found review. See "That was a great performance and I know why!" Rubric on the following page.

ADDITIONAL COMMENT(S)

This lesson can be extended to include students writing reviews about other live performances they attend. Students could write a review about their experience at a school performance or another theater. Post reviews on the school web site or send them to your local newspaper. Also, feel free to send copies of these reviews to the Opera. We love to see what your students thought about the performance and how opera education is taking place in the classroom.

Two specific points are discussed as support for your viewpoint.	One point was discussed in your review—did you even stay for the whole performance?
LENGTH OF REVIEW	Excellent work! You obviously worked hard to go in depth. Four or more paragraphs.	Very good, but leaves some ideas unexplained. This is almost ready for the newspaper. Three paragraphs.	Good. It is a bit short, but at least there is some substance. Two paragraphs.	Try harder! This is not worthy of anyone who can write his/her name. One paragraph.
CLASS PARTICIPATION	Fantastic! You have gone above and beyond the call of duty by volunteering during class and offering your opinions in a respectable manner.	Consistent participation. You added something of value to class discussions.	Acceptable amount of participation. You answered questions when asked, but rarely volunteered anything.	Unacceptable amount of participation. You did not volunteer answers, and when you did, it was in an unacceptable manner.

Lesson 4: Translating "Un bel dì" (One fine day) into other genres.

objective(s)

Students will understand the characteristics of an aria and experiment translating those characteristics into other genres.

material(s)

- CD Madame Butterfly
- LIBRETTO Madame Butterfly

procedure(s)

(1) As a class, listen to a recording of "Un bel dì" (VOX Classics CD 2 TRACK 4) while following a translation of the text (libretto PP. 12–13).

(2) Discuss the following points:
  – Does the music relate to the text? (Could this music be used for different text?)
  – How does it (not) relate? (What does the music do to relate to the text?)
  – Does the content of the text have meaning in today's society?
  – Is there a popular song that deals with the same emotions?

(3) Students are to take the text of "Un bel dì" and set it into another musical genre. For example, students may turn the text into a rap, country or pop song. Encourage the students to modernize the words.

(4) Students are to perform their compositions with the other students serving as the audience.

(5) Discuss as a class which performances were successful, why or why not? Include discussion of the effectiveness of the text separate from the music.

assessment(s)

The final class performance will be evaluated on completeness of text and its understandability. The audience can provide feedback by determining the most creative and the most effective performance. Value will be given placed on class participation.

Lesson 5: Acting scenes from Madame Butterfly

objective(s)

Students will learn about the physical gestures needed to create characterization on stage.

material(s)

- Libretto Madame Butterfly (copy pp. 2–6)
- (optional) "Props" (cups, knife, chairs, naval officer clothing, Japanese clothing)

procedure(s)

(1) Before you do this lesson in class, it is recommended that you read through this excerpt. There are a few words that your students may not understand, and there is an old use of the word "gay." Plus you should be comfortable with what you will be asking your students to act out. You may want to suggest to your students that a libretto is the text of what is being sung and the translation is of those words. It is not meant to be a spoken play.

(2) Give copies of pages 2–6 from the Madame Butterfly libretto to each student. Ask for volunteers to read and act the following parts: This lesson can be done without all of these parts being acted out. Feel free to condense students into playing multiple parts.

individuals

Sharpless	(American, US Consul at Nagasaki, friend of Pinkerton)
Pinkerton	(American, naval lieutenant)
Goro	(Japanese marriage broker)
Two servants	(Japanese house servants of Butterfly)
Butterfly	(Japanese, bride)
Uncle	(Japanese, Butterfly's uncle, called the Bonze elsewhere)

chorus

The Girls	(Japanese, unmarried, Butterfly's peers)
Cousins	(Japanese, Butterfly's extended family)
Female Cousin	(Japanese, Butterfly's cousin)
Yakuside	(Japanese, Butterfly's uncle)
Mother	(Japanese, Butterfly's mother)
Aunt	(Japanese, Butterfly's aunt)

(3) Students are to read through the excerpt, take notes and discuss the personalities of the characters. Then they are to read through it again, but they are to act out their roles in front of the classroom. Encourage students to add vocal inflection and gesture to their parts. Their choices will be discussed in the next step.

(4) After finishing acting the excerpt, discuss with the class the choices they made in creating their characters. What was done to differentiate the Japanese characters from the Americans, the males from the females, servants from the others, etc? Why were these choices made? Is there a level of hierarchy being displayed here?

(5) As a class, move the discussion to the acceptability of these gestures. In a sense, you are moving the discussion around stereotypes. Here are some suggested questions:

- Are these choices and roles acceptable to our current sensibilities?
- Are there some gestures acceptable and others unacceptable?
- Why do we have these stereotypes?

(6) For the final project, assign the students to create a list of observed gestures of the world around them, i.e. classmates, adults, parents, people on television. These gestures should be an obvious movement that gives a clear meaning to the observer. For example, someone waving their hand, bowing, pointing and making a funny or angry face all have meaning. Students are to tally the times they see the gesture repeated, and then create a list of the ten most interesting observations. For each of the ten most interesting, they are to write a paragraph explaining why these gestures were interesting and what they signify.

ASSESSMENT(S)

Value will be given for completion of each section of lesson: class participation and list of observed gestures with supporting paragraphs.

ADDITIONAL COMMENT(S)

(4) After finishing the excerpt, discuss with the class the societal role each character has in the scene. Suggested questions:
   – What is expected of Butterfly and from whom?
   – What does Butterfly's mother expect from her, and is that the same thing as the marriage broker?
   – What role does Pinkerton "play?"
   – Does Pinkerton respect Butterfly's culture? Why or why not?
   – What do you think Pinkerton is like as a person?
   – How would his friend describe him?

(5) Move the class discussion to societal roles to real life. Suggested questions:
   – Are there still societal expectations in our world? Why or why not?
   – What are the roles that you (the student) are expected to "play?"
   – What happens when people try to break out of those roles?
   – Do societal roles help or hurt you or society in general?

(6) Option 1: As a final project, the students are to interview an adult about societal roles. Give them the Acting Scenes from Madame Butterfly* Interview Form to assist in collecting information. From this interview, they are to write an essay either for or against the following statement: "Societal roles are still very prevalent in our society and are beneficial. They help people understand who they are and what their lives are supposed to be."

Option 2: Students are to find current news stories that report about how a person or group of people are trying to change their roles. These stories can come from events in other countries. Students are then to write a brief

ASSESSMENT(S)

Value will be placed on class participation and quality of final essay or summary. See the Acting Scenes from Madame Butterfly* Rubric for further details.

				_____ TOTAL POINTS OUT OF 16

Acting Out Scenes from Madame Butterfly Interview Form/Summary Paper

Lesson 6

NAME _____

Option 1 – Interview

DIRECTIONS

You are to interview someone from an older generation (at least 20 years older than you) to find out their perceptions of peoples' roles in society. Take notes on the responses given to you. From that, compose an essay either supporting or discrediting the following statement: "Societal roles are still very prevalent in our society and are beneficial. They help people understand who they are and what their lives are supposed to be." Use statements from your interview to support your position. See Acting Scenes from Madame Butterfly Rubric for grading criteria.

INTERVIEW QUESTIONS

1) Do you think that people in general are born into a societal role?

2) Do you feel that you decided your position in society or did society decide it for you?

3) Have certain roles in society changed in your lifetime? For example, has the role of women change in regards to marriage, family life and having a professional career? Or has the role of minorities changed over time?

4) Have these changes been good or bad for society? Why or why not?

5) Is it important for young people to understand roles in society?

6) Is it easy to change your position in society? For example, to move from the middle class to the upper class? From blue collar to white collar?

Option 2 – Summary Paper
Changing Roles in Current Society

DIRECTIONS

Find a current news article about a person or group of people trying to change their roles. Look for events in and outside the country. Make a copy of the article and write a summary of that article. Hand in both the article and your summary. See Acting Scenes from Madame Butterfly Rubric for grading criteria.

Lesson 7: The use of musical motifs in Madame Butterfly.

Students will learn what musical motives are and how Puccini uses them in Madame Butterfly.

material(s)

- CD Madame Butterfly (Act I, Act II) (the Price/Tucker – RCA Victor CD is recommended)
- LIBRETTO Madame Butterfly
- VOCAL or FULL SCORE Madame Butterfly (optional)

procedure(s)

(1) Define the meaning of motif as a class. Discuss where motives are found, ie. music, literature, arts, dance, daily life, language, etc. What is the purpose of motives?

(2) Discuss the use of motives in opera. See ADDITIONAL COMMENT(S) for information.

(3) Play the beginning of Act I of Madame Butterfly. Students are to follow along with the handout copy of the libretto. Make copies of PP. 1–8 for Act I and PP. 11–17 for Act II part two. They are to label the motives with a "1," "2" or "3" when they occur in the handouts. Motives used:

1 – Opening motive
This is written in a fugue-like manner, characterizing excitement and energy of the moment.
Act I (VS P. 1, CD 1 TRACK 1)
Act II (VS P. 162, CD 1 TRACK 16)

2 – Star Spangled Banner motive
Act I (VS P. 26, CD 1 TRACK 3)
Act II (VS P. 213, CD 2 TRACK 4)

3 – The "Curse" motive
Act I (VS P. 111, CD 1 TRACK 12)
Act II (VS P. 157, CD 2 TRACK 16)

Advanced music students may follow along with the vocal or full score. All locations of each motif can be found in the Flow Charts beginning on P. 41 of the Teacher's Guide.

(4) Repeat this lesson if you have students who can't "hear" the excerpts. Musical memory can be an undeveloped skill. Students will need to be confident with this skill to be able to successfully complete the final assessment.

assessment(s)

Students are to listen to the beginning of Act II – part two and identify the motives used correctly in the handout copy of the libretto. The motives used in Act II are "1 – opening motive," "2 – Star Spangled Banner motive" and "3 – the 'Curse' motive."

ADDITIONAL COMMENT(S)

This can potentially be a very difficult lesson for students (and teachers!). You don't need to be intimidated. If you feel unsure of yourself to teach this lesson, it is recommended that you go over the musical examples a number of times to become acquainted with the various motives. Likewise with the students – repeat the examples as necessary for them to be comfortable with this concept.

Use of Motives in Opera Information

Motif or motive is defined by Grove's Concise Music Dictionary as "a short melodic and/or rhythmic figure of characteristic design that reoccurs throughout a composition or a section as a unifying element." A motif is distinguished from a theme or subject by being much shorter and generally fragmentary. In fact, motifs are often derived from themes, the latter being broken up into shorter elements. As few as two notes may constitute a motif, if they are sufficiently characteristic melodically and/or rhythmically. The technique of motifs is particularly important in sonatas and symphonies, whose development sections often are largely based on motifs derived from the various themes of the expositions.

Prior to Puccini, German composer Richard Wagner developed the use of motives to new heights. He called them "leitmotivs." Grove's defines them as "those musical motifs used in Wagner's later works in association with particular characteristics, situations, ideas, etc. Wagner transforms and combines such motifs for dramatic purposes in ways that produce a continuous symphonic texture. Dramatically, they may serve simply to identify persons, events and the like, or they may provide foreshadowing or reminiscence of such elements in the drama. Much less far-reaching examples of the use of recurrent music for dramatic purposes are found as early as the late 18th century. An important antecedent of Wagner's work in this and other respects is Weber's Der Freischütz."

Motifs are commonly used in Puccini's operas. He uses them in the orchestra and voice to add character to events and recall moments in the work. The use of motives in Puccini operas are (intentionally) not as developed as in the Wagner operas, but certainly follow in his model. Below is a list of easily heard motives in first two acts of Madame Butterfly.

Videotaping the performances and presenting them on a public access or school channel may provide valuable public relations.

Lesson 8: Musical Characteristics of Madame Butterfly

objective(s)

Students will develop analytical skills to identify the musical characteristics Puccini uses in Madame Butterfly Act II – part one.

material(s)

- CD Madame Butterfly (the Price/Tucker – RCA Victor recording is recommended)
- Musical Characteristics of Madame Butterfly* Handout

procedure(s)

(1) Give Musical Characteristics of Madame Butterfly Handout to class and read the following instructions to the class:

"Listen to the CD excerpt from Act II – part one of Madame Butterfly. Follow along with the Musical Characteristics of Madame Butterfly* Handout. I will verbally identify each section of music. In the empty boxes, fill in a word or short phrase that describes the music. We will listen to the excerpt continuously and silently the first time. The second time through, I will stop the music for a discussion of your responses at each section. Please use correct musical vocabulary. Handouts will be collected at the end of the lesson."

(2) Play excerpt and announce each section. This excerpt can be found on CD 1 tracks 16–17 and CD 2 tracks 1–10. Page numbers on the handout refer to pages in the vocal score. See Musical Characteristic of Madame Butterfly* Key for more details (see following page).

(3) Play excerpt again, but stop after each section for discussion. Ask students what they wrote in each box. The correct answers are located on the Musical Characteristics of Madame Butterfly* Key.

(4) Collect the Musical Characteristics of Madame Butterfly* Handout.

assessment(s)

Assign value for acceptable answers on the handout and for class participation. It is recommended that a point value be given for each completed box on Musical Characteristics of Madame Butterfly* Handout.

additional comment(s)

This lesson can be applied to any section of the opera or another work of music.

DIRECTIONS

Listen to the CD excerpt from Act II – part one of Madame Butterfly. Follow along while your teacher verbally identifies each new section of music. In the empty boxes, fill in words that describe the music. Not ever box will be filled in. The first time through listening to the excerpt, the class will be silent. The second time through the excerpt, the teacher will stop at each section for discussion of your answers. Use correct musical vocabulary. Handouts will be collected at the end of the lesson.

Lesson 9: Understanding the libretto

objective(s)

Students will learn about the characteristics of an opera libretto.

material(s)

- libretto of Madame Butterfly
- dvd Madame Butterfly (the Hayahi/Dvorsky – rm Arts is recommended)

procedure(s)

(1) Make copies of the Madame Butterfly libretto Act ii – part two (Act iii) pp. 21–26. Give a copy to each student. From the reading, they are to prepare themselves to discuss the merits of the text. Suggested discussion topics:
– Is the libretto an effective piece of poetry?
– How "real" are the characters and situations?
– Do you feel that something is missing? What?

This reading could be given as an assignment prior to the lesson.*

(2) Have the students add what they think should be included to make the story more complete or satisfying. Depending on time, they could rewrite part, or all, of the scene.

(3) Show Act ii – part two (Act iii) of Madame Butterfly (Hayahi/Dvorsky – rm Arts dvd: chapters 25–29) and discuss the merits of the drama. Suggested questions:
– Do the students think that the story with the music is more or less effective?
– Is the drama more or less effective with the addition text that they wrote?
– Does the music "fill in" for the missing text?

Convey to the students that opera composers are very much concerned with the audience being able to understand the text. They are similar to a pop singer, playwright or movie director in that fashion. But, composing in this art form requires adjustments to the text that another art form may not need to deal with. For example, singing something generally takes longer than to speak it, or when you are dealing with very large vocal ranges as in opera, there is a point were the diction is lost. Plus, in opera, you have the use of the orchestra. There can be much "said" instrumentally which does not need to be sung on stage. These examples don't mean that opera is any more or any less of an art form—it's just what opera is.

assessment(s)

Option 1 – Students are to write an essay arguing the merits of an opera libretto. They should take the position of either an opera libretto can stand on its own or, it is only part of the whole and needs the music to be complete. Value should be placed on the quality of the essay. (See Understanding the Libretto* Rubric on following page.)

Option 2 – Students are to compose music to the libretto text AND the additional text that they wrote. For the sake of time, suggest they only set a small part from the scene. This can be done in groups with classmates performing the various roles. They are to perform their compositions for the rest of the class.

additional comment(s)

The Option 2 assessment doesn't need to be only for music students. Actually, I would encourage non-music students to attempt this project!

Understanding the Libretto Rubric

Lesson 9

NAME _____

DIRECTIONS

(1) Read the excerpt of the Madame Butterfly libretto from Act II – part two. Notice the flow and pace of the text and make notes to be able to answer the following questions:

– Is the libretto an effective piece of poetry?
– How "real" are the characters and situations?
– Do you feel that something is missing? What?

(2) Rewrite part of the libretto to make it seem more complete. Highlight your additions.

(3) Watch the DVD of Act II – part two from Madame Butterfly and prepare to answer the following questions:

– Do the students think that the story with the music is more or less effective?
– Is the drama more or less effective with the addition text that they wrote?
– Does the music "fill in" for the missing text?

(4) OPTION ONE

You are to write an essay arguing the merits of an opera libretto. You should take the position of either an opera libretto can stand on its own or, it's only part of the whole and needs the music to be complete. Value will be given based on the quality of the essay. See Understanding the Libretto Rubric for grading criteria.

OPTION TWO

You are to compose music to a portion of the libretto AND the additional text that you wrote. You may use other classmates as performers and/or the musicians. You are to perform your new composition for the rest of the class. Remember that your composition needs to still convey the story and drama to your audience. Your additional text is to be an "enhancement" of the original. See Understanding the Libretto Rubric criteria.

Understanding the Libretto Rubric

Lesson 9

NAME _____

DIRECTIONS

OPTION ONE – Compose a persuasive essay

You are to write a persuasive essay taking the position of "an opera libretto can stand on its own" or "an opera libretto is only part of a whole and it needs music to be complete." The essay should contain reasoned arguments (based on your classroom experience) and good grammar.

POINTS	3	2	1
GRAMMAR	Excellent! Zero mistakes spelling and syntax.	Good. 3–5 mistakes in spelling and syntax.	Poor. 6 or more mistakes in spelling and syntax.
SUPPORTING STATEMENTS	Great! You have used 4 or more solid statements supporting your position.	Good. You used 2 or 3 statements supporting your position.	Poor. You barely used 1 statement supporting your position.
EFFECTIVENESS OF YOUR POSITION	Wonderful! Your position is argued with great conviction.	Good. Your position is convincing and logical.	Poor. Your position is not argued with any conviction.
TOTAL POINTS

OPTION TWO – Compose a new piece of opera including your additional text

You are to compose a new section of Madame Butterfly and include your original text. Your new piece should still convey the story and drama, but be enhanced with your new text. Use classmates as performers and/or musicians. You will perform your new creation in front of the class. Hint: Be creative! Think "outside the box." Use props and other things around you to create opera.

POINTS	3	2	1
CREATIVITY	Highly unique – uses props and other items to enhance the story.	Unique – uses some props to enhance the story.	Not unique – no use of props or other items to enhance story.
CLARITY OF TEXT	Very clear – audience understood all text, audience not distracted.	Clear – audience understood most of the text, audience rarely distracted.	Unclear – audience didn't understand most of the text, distracting.
EFFECTIVENESS OF THE PERFORMANCE	Very effective – audience engaged in a strong story.	Effective – audience was engaged in the story.	Ineffective – audience was not engaged.

Lesson 10: Interpretations of "Un bel dì"

objective(s)

Students will learn to compare and contrast musical elements from two recordings of "Un bel dì" from Madame Butterfly.

material(s)

- Both CD recordings of Madame Butterfly
- Interpretations of "Un bel dì"* Worksheet (see following page) – 2 copies per student
- Text of "Un bel dì" (p. 12 in libretto) and "Con onor muore" (p. 25 in libretto)*
- Music of "Un bel dì" (vocal score p. 170; full score p. 230) and "Con onor muore" (vocal score p. 317; full score p. 468)

procedure(s)

(1) Play the "Un bel dì" (CD 1 track 17 – Price/Tucker/RCA Victor CD) for the class *(see additional comment(s) below). Students are to write down five facts and five opinions of the performance on the Interpretations of "Un bel dì"* Worksheet (see following page). You may need to prepare your students for this lesson by defining fact and opinion especially when analyzing music. Ask students if they think there will be a noticeable difference between this recording and the next.

(2) Play the recording of "Un bel dì" (CD 2 track 4 – Spacagna/Di Renzi/vox Classics CD) for the class. Again, students are to write down five facts and five opinions of this performance.

(3) As a class discuss the similarities and differences between the two recordings. Suggested topics for discussion:
– determine the artistic merits of the two performances
– personal preferences between the two
– why there are differences (the singers are performing the same written music) – which recording is more dramatic, musical, authentic, etc.

assessment(s)

Play both performances of "Con onor muore" from Act II – part two from the Price/Tucker/RCA Victor recording (CD 2 track 17) and Spacagna/Di Renzi/VOX Classics recording (CD 4 track 7). Students are to create a list of five facts and five opinions for each performance. Give the students another copy of the handout for the assessment. Students are then to write a persuasive essay describing the merits of one performance over the other. Their two lists of facts and opinions should be used in the essay.

additional comment(s)

* Depending on the musical level (and musical memory) of your students, a variation of this lesson could be to include a copy of the text from the libretto, vocal score or full score. This may help students focus on the music and notice the subtle details between the performances.

The performance of "Con onor muore" from the Spacagna/Di Renzi/VOX Classics CD is from the Brescia edition of Madame Butterfly. This is structurally different than the Paris edition from the other CD recording.

DIRECTIONS

Write down five facts and five opinions after you listen to the first performance of "Un bel dì." Follow the same procedure after listening to the second performance. Remember that facts are objective. For example, a fact is "one plus one equals two." However, opinions are subjective, such as "I liked the first performance because it went fast."

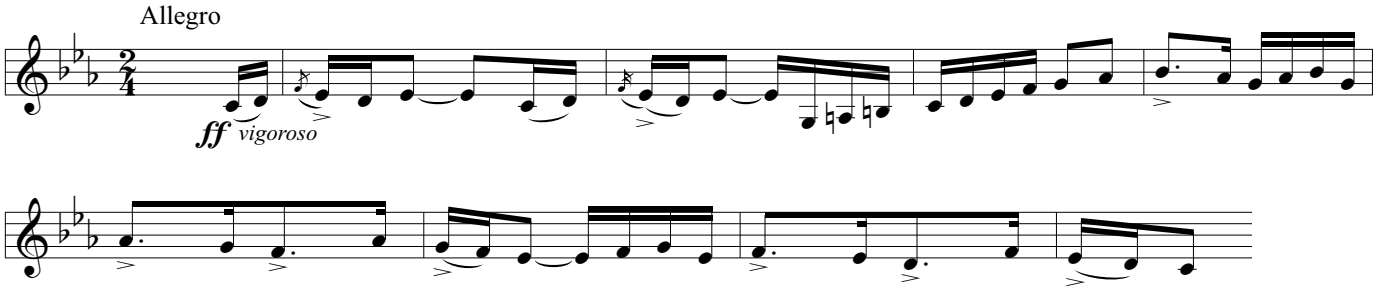
Synopsis and Musical Excerpts

PRELUDE

The opera opens with a vigorous fugue in the strings, set to following theme:

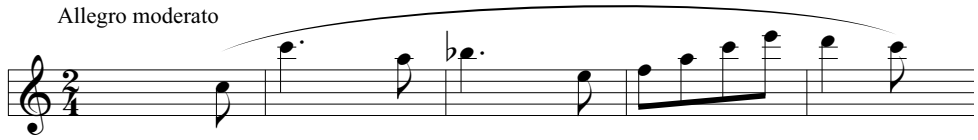
(1) PRELUDE



ACT I

Outside a little house overlooking the Nagasaki harbor, Pinkerton, an American naval officer, is making the final arrangements with the marriage broker, Goro, for a Japanese wedding. The following recurrent theme is established in the orchestra.

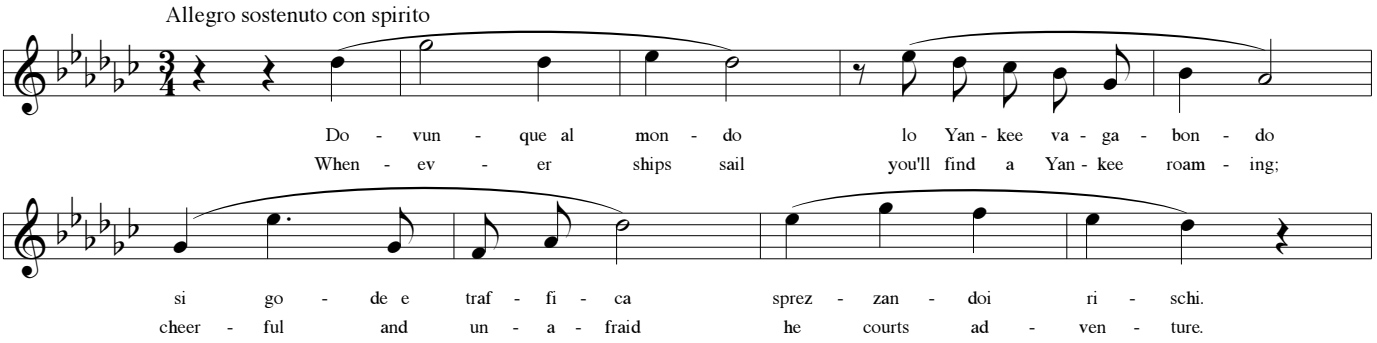
(2) SHARPLESS THEME



According to law, the marriage will not be binding, and Pinkerton revels in the carefree arrangement. The American national anthem introduces his aria.

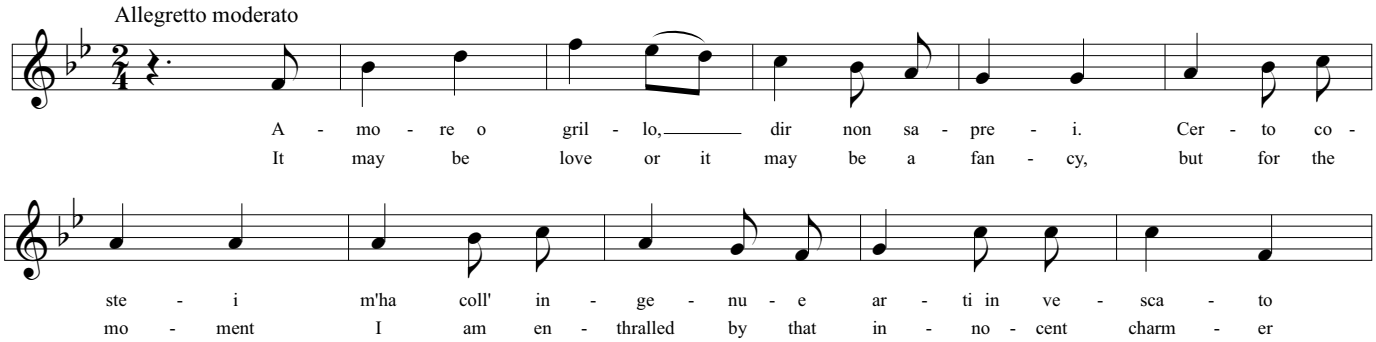
(3A) AMERICAN NATIONAL ANTHEM

(3B) PINKERTON: DOVUNQUE AL MONDO



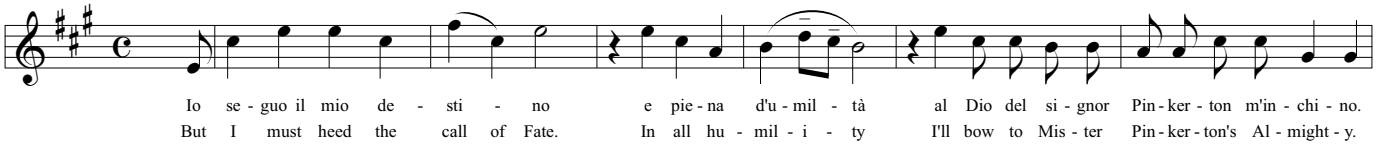
The American Consul, Sharpless, warns Pinkerton that his bride, Cio-Cio-San (called Butterfly by her friends), is serious about the marriage.

(4) PINKERTON: AMORE O GRILLO



Butterfly and her relatives arrive. She tells Pinkerton about herself, her family and her age – which is only 15 – and shows him the few possessions she has brought, including the ceremonial dagger with which her father killed himself. Butterfly confesses that she had secretly visited the mission and converted to Christianity so that they may worship the same god.

(5) BUTTERFLY: IL SEGUO IL MIO DESTINO



The brief ceremony is performed and a toast is offered. Uncle Yakuside imbibes a bit too too much wine.

(5) TUTTI: O KAMI, O KAMI

As the celebration begins, an ominous figure appears. He is Butterfly's uncle, the Bonze, a Japanese priest, who curses Butterfly for abandoning the Japanese gods in favor of Christianity. All the relatives side with the Bonze, and they turn on the young bride.

(6) CURSE THEME

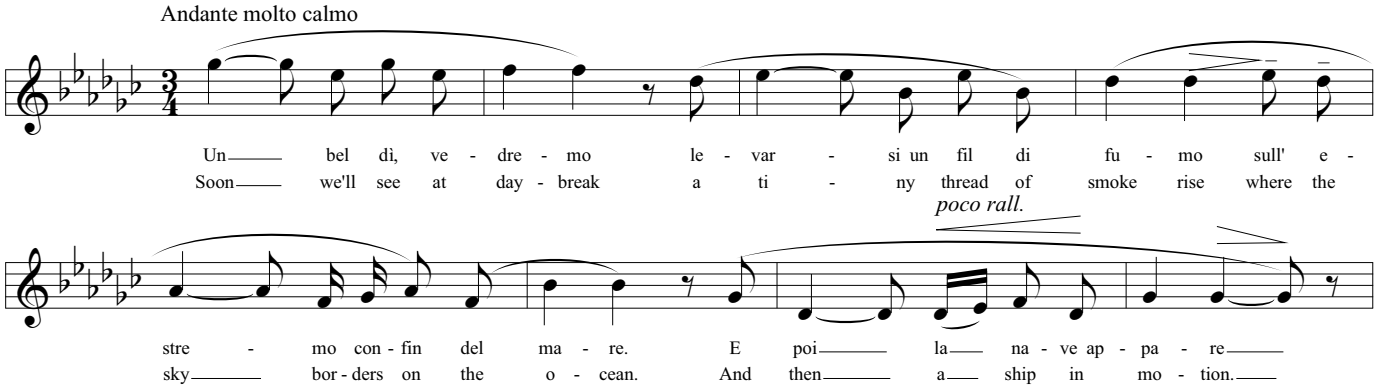
Pinkerton orders them all away, and in the long and tender love duet that closes the act, Butterfly forgets her troubles. Together, Pinkerton and Butterfly enter their new home.

(7) PINKERTON, BUTTERFLY: VIENE LA SERA...BIMBA DAGLI OCCHI PIENI DI MALIA

ACT II

Part one Three years have passed since Pinkerton sailed for America, but Butterfly remains loyal and describes to Suzuki her dream of his return.

(8) BUTTERFLY: UN BEL DÌ



Sharpless, knowing that Pinkerton has taken an American wife and will soon be arriving in Nagasaki with her, attempts to prepare Butterfly for the shock, but she is too excited by news of Pinkerton's return to listen. Goro enters with the wealthy Prince Yamadori, who is courting Butterfly. When Goro and Yamadori leave, Sharpless gently advises her to accept the Prince. That is out of the question, she insists, and she brings in the reason for that impossibility – her young son, named Sorrow. But, she adds, he will be called Joy when his father returns. Defeated, Sharpless leaves, promising to tell Pinkerton of the boy.

A cannon is heard, and Butterfly and Suzuki see Pinkerton's ship, the Abraham Lincoln, coming into the harbor. Butterfly jubilantly prepares for his return, filling the room with flowers and again donning her bridal costume.

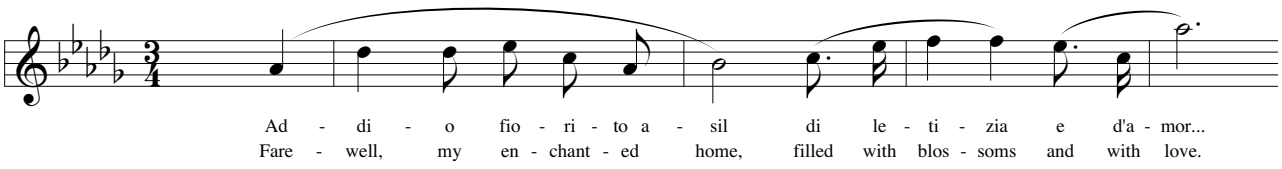
(9) BUTTERFLY, SUZUKI: TUTTA LA PRIMAVERA

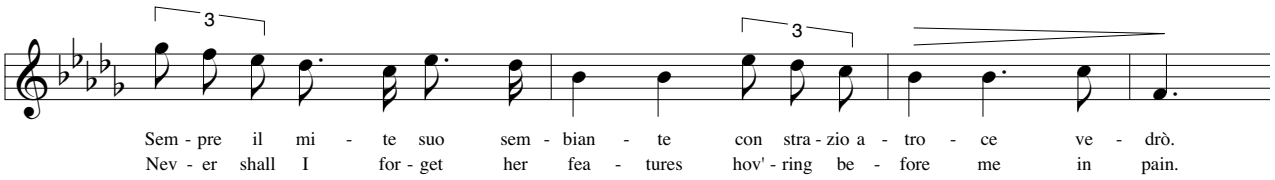
As night falls, Butterfly, Suzuki and the child wait, motionless. An unseen chorus is heard.

(10) HUMMING CHORUS

Part two Dawn finds Butterfly, Suzuki and Sorrow just where they were at the close of the last scene, except that the maid and the child are fast asleep. Butterfly takes her sleeping son into another room, singing him a lullaby. Sharpless enters with Pinkerton and his wife, Kate. Suzuki almost at once realizes who this is. She cannot bear to tell her mistress, and neither can Pinkerton. He sings a passionate farewell to his once-happy home, and leaves.

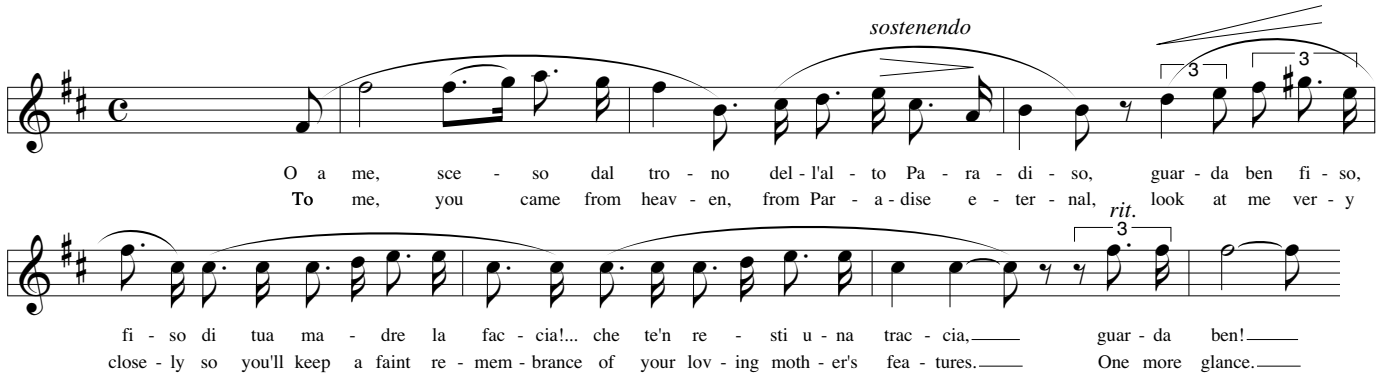
(11) PINKERTON: ADDIO FIORITO ASIL





Butterfly, entering, sees Kate and realizes the painful truth. With dignity she tells Kate that she may have her boy if Pinkerton will come soon to fetch him. Left alone with the child, she makes an agonizing farewell.

(12) BUTTERFLY: O A ME, SCENSO DAL TRONO



She blindfolds the boy and goes behind a screen where she stabs herself. Pinkerton comes rushing back, but it is too late.

KEY AND DETAILS

Scene
The terms used to identify each section is the page found in the Schirmer vocal score. (VS)

Musical Description
The terms used here are the tempo markings in the score. Metronome markings follow in parenthesis. The KEY given is decided by the tonality at the beginning of the scene. Puccini does shift tonality and key changes constantly, which reflects the style of the era. Significant changes in tonality are noted.

Orchestration
Comments given here are general in nature and are intended to give the listener some insight into the use of the orchestra. This is another element used to tell the story. Descriptions are not necessarily from Puccini, but suggest what we know about the orchestra at that time.

Themes
Identified here are significant melodies used and sometimes reused by various characters. The names of the themes are based on common use found in standard scholarly books about Puccini.

Drama
This is the basic story line. Main characters are given in shorthand:

Madame Butterfly = B	Suzuki = SZ	Imperial Commissioner = IC
Pinkerton = B	Goro = G
Sharpless = S	Kate = K

Related Information
These comments included are interesting facts about Puccini and Madame Butterfly in a larger context, beyond the work itself.

b Lucca, December 22, 1858; d Brussels, November 29, 1924

A scene from Minnesota Opera's 2010 production of La bohème

Giacomo Puccini was born into a family of court composers and organists in the historic city of Lucca, Italy. With a strong feeling of tradition in the Puccini family, it was expected that Giacomo would assume his deceased father's position as Maestro di Cappella when he came of age. By 14 he already was playing organ in a number of the town's churches.

Albina Magi, the composer's mother, also came from a family of musicians. Her brother, Fortunato, became her son's first music teacher. His uncle was a strict instructor and was known to kick Puccini when he made mistakes. For his part, Puccini was unruly, easily bored and preferred to hunt for bird's nests rather than study. Seeing little progress, Albina decided a new teacher was in order and sent the boy to Carlo Angeloni, a former pupil of her husband. Giacomo's attitude and study habits quickly changed.

Money was scarce for the family, and to supplement his church earnings Puccini would play piano at the local bars and at houses of "ill repute." He withheld a small percentage of his earnings for cigarettes and began the bad habit of smoking (which ultimately caused his death). As a young man, Puccini was determined to be rich and independent. His teacher introduced him to opera through the study of Verdi's piano scores. Then in 1879, Puccini attended his first opera performance, Aida, and was deeply moved – his destiny was to be a composer for the theater.

He knew it was necessary to study in the Italian operatic capital, Milan. After completing studies at the Pacini Institute of Music in Lucca, Puccini enrolled at the Milan Conservatory in 1880 under the auspices of a royal scholarship. His living expenses were provided by a loan from an uncle but money was always tight. Puccini lived the bohemian life of a poor student and became acquainted with many important musical and literary figures. For a short while, he shared a room with the composer Pietro Mascagni, who became famous for his one-act opera Cavalleria rusticana. To save money, the two of them would cook meals in their room and, as this was strictly forbidden, one would play the piano loudly to drown out the noise of pots and pans. One can see how the composer drew from his own life experiences in the writing of his opera, La bohème.

A scene from Minnesota Opera's 2005 production of Tosca

In 1883 at the age of 25, Puccini graduated with a diploma in composition from the Milan Conservatory. His thesis composition, Capriccio sinfonico, was played by the student orchestra and received high praise from influential critics. This was the start of a celebrated career.

A scene from Minnesota Opera's 2004 production of Madame Butterfly

Puccini was not a prolific composer. Unlike most of his contemporaries, he produced his operas at long intervals, partly because of his fastidiousness in choosing subjects, several of which he took up only to abandon after several months, and partly because of his constant demands for modifications of the texts. Much of his time, too, was spent in hunting in the marshes around his home and in trips abroad to supervise revivals of his works.

The composer's first work for the stage, Le villi, was originally submitted to a contest sponsored by the wealthy music publisher, Edoardo Sonzogno. The one-act opera received not even honorable mention, but Puccini was certain of its merit. He and librettist Ferdinando Fontana began to canvass the opera to the broader circle of the Italian intelligentsia. One of these individuals was the highly influential librettist and composer, Arrigo Boito, who was instrumental in getting Le villi staged.

The reception to the new work was mixed, but the revised two-act version was staged in a number of cities outside of Italy (a remarkable feat for such a young composer). Puccini's next opera, Edgar, however, was a resounding critical failure, yet the astute publisher, Giulio Ricordi, found fault in the libretto only and promise in the music. He pitted himself against the shareholders of his publishing house who demanded that Puccini be released from retainer. Ricordi's confidence was rewarded with Manon Lescaut, Puccini's first true success.

In 1884, Puccini became acquainted with Elvira Gemignani who was encouraged by her husband, a pharmacist and former classmate of Puccini's, to take voice lessons with the composer. Shortly after his mother's death, he was joined by Elvira and her daughter, Fosca, in Milan. She left her son, Renato, with her husband. Two years later she gave birth to their only child, Antonio, which caused a great scandal in Puccini's birthplace of Lucca – his family, very conventional and religious, was outraged. He seldom visited that city again in his lifetime.

With the popularity of Manon Lescaut, Puccini was now generally considered by the Italian art circle to be Verdi's successor (even by the great composer himself). As the royalties began rolling in, Puccini began to show a predilection for machines and gadgets, in particular fast automobiles and motor boats. His solitary nature drew him to a purchase a villa near the sea, surrounded by the mountains at Torre del Lago. Through the years, this villa became a home base where he could enjoy his passion for hunting and fishing, along with the nature and silence of the surroundings.

During the 1890s, Puccini began working with Luigi Illica, who worked out the scheme and drafted the dialogue, and the poet and playwright Giuseppe Giacosa, who put the lines into verse. Although they had participated on Manon Lescaut (in a string of several librettists) their first true collaboration was La bohème in 1896, followed four years later by Tosca and then Madame Butterfly four years after that. Giacosa died in 1906, putting an end to the successful team that produced three of Puccini's most enduring works.

In 1904, Giacomo and Elvira were finally married legally, following her first husband's death. Their relationship, however, was a constant storm. She was insanely jealous, and a letter, written prior to their union, stated her decision to leave him. Many of her accusations about him were not unfounded. The composer had quite a weakness for women and carried on many extramarital affairs throughout his life.

A scene from Minnesota Opera's 2004 production of Madame Butterfly

While Puccini was recuperating from an automobile accident, a young girl named Doria Manfredi was hired as a nurse and maid. She remained in the household as the Puccinis' maid. Elvira saw the makings of an affair and immediately discharged her. But that was not enough. She continued her slanderous accusations through the small village, and the townspeople, aware of her husband's past philandering, quite naturally believed her. The innocent girl, totally humiliated, took poison and died after five days of unbearable suffering. Giacomo took refuge in Rome and Elvira fled to Milan. Doria's family sued Elvira following an autopsy that proved Doria's virginity.

Puccini and his wife lived apart for four months while Elvira persisted in defending her legal position. The case was tried and she was sentenced to five months' imprisonment – but Puccini made a large financial settlement with the Manfredi family and the lawsuit was dropped. In September of 1909, Giacomo, Elvira and Antonio were reunited at Torre. A month later he wrote, "In my home I have peace – Elvira is good – and the three of us live happily together."

Puccini's later operas were quite varied in their styles and subjects. La fanciulla del West, set in the American West,is notable for its advanced impressionistic orchestration and composition. La rondine was designed to be a musical comedy in the Viennese style but seemed more related to La traviata than to Die Fledermaus. Il trittico was an evening of one-act operas that are quite a mixed bag: Il tabarro was Puccini's bow toward the verismo style; Suor Angelica is a gripping emotional drama set in a nunnery; Gianni Schicchi is a comic masterpiece that features Puccini at his most exuberant. There is a thought that Puccini was mocking his own success with this piece.

At the age of 60, the composer set out to write an opera that was atypical of his past style. He studied the developments in contemporary music and based the new work on Count Carlo Gozzi's fable about the cruel Chinese princess Turandot. The completion of the work was cut short due to his ill-health.

Puccini had been dealing with a persistent cough for months. He began complaining of stinging sore throats and his diagnosis revealed cancer of the throat. He traveled to Brussels to receive radium therapy, accompanied by his son and stepdaughter – Elvira had bronchitis and remained in Milan. Radioactive needles were inserted into the tumor. Initially, the doctor was optimistic, but four days later, the composer suffered a heart attack. Puccini died on November 29, 1924 and his remains are now entombed in the chapel of his villa at Torre.

Although Turandot was left unfinished, the conductor Arturo Toscanini entrusted its completion to another Ricordi composer, Franco Alfano. In 1926, the opera premiered under the baton of Toscanini. Out of respect for the composer, the maestro stopped where Puccini had written his last notes. He turned to the audience and emotionally said, "At this point the master laid down his pen."

Puccini has been much maligned for his flirtation with popular music, but he had an uncanny feel for a good story and talent for enthralling yet economical music. His experiments with tonality and form, while constant, were always subtle, and, unlike his contemporary Stravinsky, he did not seem to need to be controversial. His melodies are mostly simple stepwise vocal lines, yet with them he managed to create arias of astonishing beauty. The use of orchestra is economical and to the point – few operas of his have overtures and Puccini often captures the right dramatic moments with just a splash of colorful chords. Though his personal life was plagued with self-doubt and laborious perfectionism, Puccini profoundly influenced the world of opera with a deep understanding of music, drama and humanity.

Madame Butterfly completes the succession of Puccini's three most popular operas, written exactly four years apart. Yet the opera's initial reception was frosty at best, played to the highly reactive Milanese, who whistled, howled and accused the composer of self-plagiarism. Cries of "Butterfly is pregnant; ah the little Toscanini" arose when Rosina Storchio's kimono caught a draft (the soprano's affair with the famed conductor was commonly known), and some of the opera's most beautiful moments were greeted with unmasked hostility. Though the rowdy crowd may have been incited by an anti-Puccini cabal, they had indeed achieved their intended purpose – the evening had truly been a fiasco.

Poor Puccini must have been devastated, another blow in a series of unfortunate incidents that plagued his life during the preceding year. A serious automobile accident in February 1903 left him with a broken leg, which was slow to mend and hampered the progress of his most recent opus. Not to mention that he was homebound with his female companion, the ill-tempered Elvira Gemignani, unable to visit his current mistress, Corinna, who was conveniently set up by the composer on the edge of town. Nor did the domestic situation look especially promising. Elvira's estranged husband had died the day after the crash, leaving open the very likely possibility of her marriage to Puccini (divorce had not been an option in Italy at this time) after the passing of a mandatory 10-month period widows were required to wait before reattaching themselves. The composer had doubts over his 20-year relationship with Elvira (even though they had produced a son, Antonio), but increasing pressure from friends, family and Elvira hastened the dreaded wedding day, which finally took place on January 3, 1904.

On an even more personal note was the bruise to his ego. Puccini had spent great care crafting his most original score to date and was unusually confident on the night of its premiere, even inviting family members, something he would never do. Four years earlier, he had witnessed a performance of David Belasco's play in London while supervising the British premiere of Tosca. In spite of the fact he spoke little English, the composer reacted with enthusiasm, in particular to Butterfly's nightlong vigil, a 14-minute scene during which there was no dialogue, only dramatic lighting effects indicating the passage of time and the coming of the new day (Belasco was a highly innovative turn-of-the-century playwright and producer who would also be the source of Puccini's next opus, La fanciulla del West). Though Puccini would consider a number of other options, including literary works by Émile Zola (La faute de l'Abbé Mouret), Edmond Rostrand (Cyrano de Bergerac), Alphonse Daudet (Tartarin de Tarascon), Maurice Maeterlinck (clearly poaching on Debussy's plan to set Pelléas et Mélisande) and Victor Hugo (Les misérables, Notre Dame de Paris), he found himself perennially drawn to the emotional plight of Cio-Cio-San.

The composer turned to his creative team of Luigi Illica and Giuseppe Giacosa, who had so faithfully served him in the past. Illica brought some experience to the table – he had already worked on a Japan-based libretto, Iris, set by Pietro Mascagni in 1898 (the premiere of which Puccini had attended), and Giacosa was a fervent reader of Japanese poetry. As it turned out, Belasco's drama only depicted what would become Act II of Puccini's opera, and in order to work up the preliminary action of Act I, they were forced to consult the playwright's source, a short story by John Luther Long. From that material, Illica also crafted a third, intermediate scene located at the American consulate, where Butterfly seeks Sharpless to inquire after her overdue spouse. There she meets Kate Pinkerton who, by coincidence, is looking into the whereabouts of her husband's child. During the awkward encounter, Kate treats Butterfly with little more respect than a "china doll," which sets the drama distinctly into a different direction, though some of her careless attitude would be retained in the opera's early versions.

The composer came to see the consulate scene as an interruption and demanded it be dropped. Illica was adamant and insisted that, if the scene wasn't going to be in the opera, it could at least be included in the published libretto as an addendum. He would not get his way, nor would Giacosa, who warned that Act II, with the recreation of Butterfly's evening wait, would last at least an hour and a half, too long for the attention span of an Italian audience, who would customarily get an intermission (Verdi once quipped that a 42-minute act of Otello was two minutes too long). Giacosa also complained that many of the lines he had given to Pinkerton at the end of the opera had been eliminated. He threatened to quit and had to be assuaged by the intervention of publisher Giulio Ricordi.

Puccini wouldn't budge. Still struck by Belasco's play, his vision of the drama was clear-cut and not open for discussion – the opera would be played entirely in Butterfly's home. To spice things up musically, he painstakingly researched Japanese-based themes, even diving into The Mikado, the popular operetta by Gilbert and Sullivan. He also picked the brain of soprano Tamaki Miura (who would become a great Butterfly interpreter in the first decades of the 20th century) and consulted with Madame Hisako Oyama, the wife of a Japanese diplomat in Rome, for authentic Japanese melodies. Long's story rang a note of truth as Oyama recalled the rumor of a similar incident that actually had occurred in Nagasaki.

His effort was for naught, as the opera's novelty was lost on the opening night public, resulting in one of the greatest theatrical failures since the Paris premiere of Tannhäuser in 1861. The composer returned the 20,000 lire commissioning fee, withdrew his score and canceled the next production in Rome. Ricordi, initially skeptical of Puccini's choice in subject, believed the opera deserved a second viewing, albeit with a few changes. Giulio's son, Tito, recalled that the city of Brescia had always been warm to Puccini's works, and arranged for a production to be mounted in May. Puccini went back to his new opera and made many revisions, dividing the action into three parts with two intermissions and adding a short tenor aria, "Addio, fiorito asil," to the final scene, as operatic custom demanded (Giacosa had been correct on both counts).

As predicted, the Brescia premiere was warmly greeted, and Butterfly began a tenuous journey around the world, making it to Buenos Aires, London, Bologna, Budapest and Washington, D.C. Puccini always feared another failure and was careful to approve all aspects of each production. At nearly every juncture, more small changes were made, but nothing as drastic as those for the Paris production at the Opéra-Comique in 1906. The director, Albert Carré, required the softening of certain troublesome aspects to satisfy his bourgeois audience [who still hadn't sacrificed their upright mores in spite of having been nursed on progressive works such as Carmen (1875) and Pelléas (1902)]. Granted, it was an unconventional and daring opera for its day. The impresario was opposed to Pinkerton's portrayal as a "yankee vagabondo," both a sexual adventurer and boorish "barbarian" full of politically incorrect jibes aimed at Butterfly's family and the local culture (in particular, the behavior of her alcoholic uncle, Yakuside, whom he incites to get drunk after the marriage ceremony). Also found distasteful was Kate Pinkerton's confrontation with Butterfly near the end of the opera, an unforgiving image of a cold Western woman – most of her lines were reassigned to Sharpless. Equally suspect was Butterfly's disclosure of how much Pinkerton paid for her and her vow to live economically – this turned into a joyous admission of how she and her new husband will now worship the same deity.

At first reluctant, the ever-sensitive Puccini made the changes and even published them as the final, "definitive" version, fearing those elements were the cause of Butterfly's initial downfall. It was this Paris edition that returned to La Scala for its second performance run in 1925 – one year after Puccini's death (the original Milan version wouldn't be revived until 1982, at Venice's Teatro La Fenice). Still, one wonders if the insecure composer was simply bowing to pressure, and many believe the earlier Brescia score represents his truest intentions.

In 1853, American naval Commodore Matthew Perry positioned five ships led by the USS Powhatan in Edo (Tokyo) Bay and demanded the Japanese to open their ports to foreign trade. The xenophobic shogunate had enjoyed a self-imposed exile for 200 years, but outmatched and outgunned, the Japanese agreed to Perry's terms. Both sides were to benefit – America obtained a strategic refueling and intelligence base, and Japan was quickly ushered into the Industrial Revolution.

Perry's audacious American colonialism would have a profound effect on Western civilization, particularly in the art world. As Japanese culture was soon featured in subsequent World Exhibitions of the Industrial Age, artists from all disciplines were quickly attracted to the unusual perspective found in highly aesthetic and skillfully executed artworks from the Far East. The Realists and Impressionists were excited by the cropping of figures, the oblique angles, the emphasis on nature and overall asymmetry of composition; the Post-Impressionists and Art Nouveau painters drew from the simple forms and emphasis on pattern.

The music world was equally invigorated. Already touched by the Occidental and the Near East, composers yielded such works as Bizet's Les pêcheurs de perles (1863; set in ancient Ceylon), Meyerbeer's L'Africaine (1865; set on an island in the Indian Ocean, presumably Madagascar), Verdi's Aida (1871; Memphis and Thebes), Saint-Saëns's La princesse jaune (1872; Japan), Bizet's Djamileh (1872; Cairo) and Mascagni's Iris (1898; Japan). Biblical subjects typically set in the Middle East once again became fair game, with La reine de Saba (Gounod; 1862) and Samson et Dalila (Saint-Saëns; 1868) as popular examples. Even Bizet's Carmen (1875; Spain) had an exotic flare.

As they often spawned these musical adaptations, it's not surprising that literary works set in foreign locales began to proliferate as well. In particular, Louis-Marie-Julien Viaud, a French naval lieutenant writing under the pen name of Pierre Loti, retold his tales of the high seas under such far-away titles as Aziyadé, Rarahu, Les trois dames de la Kasbah, Japoneries d'automne, Pêcheur d'Islande, Fantôme d'Orient, Jérusalem, La Galilée and Ramuntcho, among others. Several of these were adapted for the stage: Rarahu became Léo Delibes's Indian opera Lakmé (1883), African-based Spahi was set by Lucien Lambert (1897) and the Japanese Madame Chrysanthème (1893) was adapted by André Messager. Puccini knew Messager from his student days and had reconnected with him in recent years for the French premieres of his earlier works (Messager was a conductor at the Opéra-Comique) and likely knew of the opera.

Another creative artist was aware of Loti's Japanese tale. John Luther Long, a lawyer from Philadelphia with literary aspirations, created his own geisha story with many of the same elements: a naval lieutenant's temporary marriage with a Japanese woman, a close male companion, Yves, and a female counterpart to complete the quartet, the landlord's daughter Oyouki. Where Loti's narrative is merely descriptive, told from a male perspective with meticulous documentation of their various outings and scrutiny of the local mileau, Long's novel throws the focus on the heroine. And while the climax of Madame Chrysanthème is the suspicion of an affair between Yves and the title character, Long's Butterfly faces a succession of agonizing situations – living as an outcast among her family and friends (save Suzuki), painfully waiting for Pinkerton's arrival after his ship had docked and an excruciating confrontation with Mrs.

Pinkerton at the American consulate, during which "Adelaide" casually remarks "How very charming – how lovely – you are, dear! Will you kiss me, you pretty – plaything!" Long concludes with Butterfly's botched suicide attempt (after which Suzuki binds the wound, and the two spirit the child away to locations unknown), where Loti's marriage ends amicably and dispassionately after a mere three months, with his former bride tactlessly testing the validity of his final payment with a metal hammer. In contrast, with more youthful naïvété, Butterfly mistakes the parting divorce settlement as a promise of return.

Japonisme reached North America at the turn of the century when innovative playwright David Belasco was looking for new ideas. Belasco had spent his early years on the West Coast, working in all facets of the theater business, learning it from the bottom up. When his play La belle russe was accepted by a New York theater in 1882, a chapter in theater history was born. Already there was a trend in naturalist theater, as evidenced by Emile Zola's treatise on the subject (Le naturalisme au théâtre, 1881), and Belasco's particular brand of realism took theater production to a new level. Among his enhancements included bloody sides of beef used to enhance the brutality of a slaughterhouse, the spreading of pine needles onstage to augment the sense of being in the forest, and even the frying of pancakes onstage to recreate the authentic feel of New York's famous Child's Restaurant. To heighten the plight of Butterfly, he lopped off Long's preliminary information to create unity of time and place (generally 24 hours within a single setting) and portrayed Butterfly's night-long silent vigil with a dramatic change in color and lighting with watershed electrical techniques. Belasco realistically retained Butterfly's broken English, an aspect that delivers as live theater much more successfully than as written text ("Sa-ay! Mebby you also don' thing he go'n' take us live in his large castle at United States America?"). Finally, to heighten the drama, Butterfly is successful in her attempt at hara kiri.

Pinkerton is curiously absent in both Long and Belasco – in the novel, though frequently referenced, most of his utterances are made in the shadow of the past, and he is only seen from a distance in Butterfly's present world. During the play, Pinkerton makes two appearances, but only has a handful of spoken lines. Clearly his role had to be augmented to satisfy the expectations of Puccini's audience, who would require a romantic leading man, caddish as he may be. Also needed to heighten the conflict and irresolution of Act I was the inclusion of a dramatically decisive moment – the appearance of the Bonze. In Long and Belasco, Butterfly's conversion to Christianity is merely footnoted as a denial of her ancestors, in particular the living ones whom her husband finds so tedious.

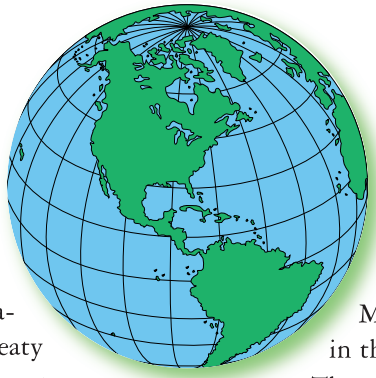
John Luther Long did not only have Loti's novel at his disposal – he also had the recollections of his sister, Jennie Correll, who had worked as a missionary in Japan during the latter part of the 19th century. She apparently had known the son of a Scottish merchant, Thomas Blake Glover, whose mother was a Japanese "tea house" girl, Yamamura Tsura, also known as Ochô-San. She had a son of mixed parentage, Tomisaburo, yet it is likely he was adopted – according to Jan van Rij (Madame Butterfly, Stone Street Press); the abandonment issue comes from a possible Glover relation's liaison with another woman of the "entertainment industry," Kaga Maki, who was forced to give up the illegitimate child. Correll claimed to be intimate with all parties (Tomisaburo had been her student), and with a dash of sensationalism, revealed her account "previously known to only two people," in the early 1930s, after Madame Butterfly had become an enormous hit. She was sketchy about the suicide, which was brought up by soprano Tamaki Miura a few years later. Long apparently had told her about the Glover family and Ochô-San's attempt on taking her own life, which may or may not be true, yet the motivation appears unclear as Glover continued to stay with her in Japan. Of course, Long only knew the facts his sister told to him, and as it turns out, she is a potentially unreliable source. Equally plausible, Correll simply may have picked the story up as shop-talk gossip – there were certainly an abundance of temporary marriages at this time (as Loti indicated in his memoirs), many of which resulted in unexpected pregnancies and absent fathers.

As an interesting footnote, Thomas B. Glover had a role in developing Japan into a world power – he was active as a gunrunner to Japan and assisted rebels in bringing down the Tokugawa Shogun in 1868. In addition to his many subsequent entrepreneurial enterprises (which included importing the first steam locomotive to Japan), Glover worked for his friend from those rebel days, Yataro Iwasaki, founder of the Mitsubishi company. Glover's son, Tomisaburo, the "real" Dolore, tragically took his own life days after the surrender of Japan in 1945, unable to reconcile his divided East/West sympathies. Ochô-San died in 1899, after surgery, and Kaga Maki in 1906, presumably of natural causes. In a related argument, Arthur Groos (Cambridge Opera Journal, 3, 2, 125–158) draws notice to a naval officer, William B. Franklin, and a ship's doctor, John Stamford Sayre (Long's surname for Puccini's Sharpless) serving aboard a Japan-bound ship in the last decade of the 19th century, at the same time as Correll was in Nagasaki. But the identity of any actual "Cio-Cio-San" associated with these two men remains elusive.



History, Politics

- The Entente Cordiale between Great Britain and France comes into existence. In part it is simply an understanding between the two nations, alarmed by the threatening power of Germany and Austria-Hungary, and in part a formal treaty concerning relations in colonial areas, especially Africa. France accepts Britain's position in Egypt while England allows France and Spain to move on Morocco.
- Russo-Japanese War breaks out.
- America ends its occupation of Cuba.
- Rafael Reyes becomes Dictator of Columbia.
- Hereros and Hottentots revolt in German Southwest Africa.
- A treaty is signed between Bolivia and Chile.
- Nikola Pasic, nationalist anti-Austrian, becomes Serbian Prime Minister.
- Russian governor general of Finland, Bobrikov, is assassinated.
- Britain and Brazil sign an arbitration convention to settle the disputed border of British Guiana.
- The U.S. tales charge of the finances of the Dominican Republic, which was in virtual bankruptcy. By agreeing to finance the debts of the Dominican Republic, the U.S. opens the door to interference in the internal affairs of Caribbean, causing much ill will toward the U.S. later.
- A British military expedition forces the Dalai Lhama, spiritual and governmental leader of Tibet, to sign a treaty granting Britain trading posts in three cities. By the treaty Tibet also guarantees it would not cede territory to a foreign power, although in 1906 and 1907 England recognized China's suzerainty over Tibet.
- Theodore Roosevelt wins U.S. presidential election. In December he issues what is known as the Roosevelt Corollary to the Monroe Doctrine: since by the original Monroe Doctrine the U.S. would not allow foreign nations to intervene in the Western Hemisphere, it was the duty of the country to see to it that any wrongs inflicted by the protected nations on foreign powers are addressed.

Economy and Trade

- The German Steel Union is formed from several cartels that controlled the steel, rail and girder industries.
- The History of the Standard Oil Company, a two-volume muckraking work by Ida Minerva Tarbell, discloses rampant corruption in the largest U.S. oil company.
- The U.S. Supreme Court dissolves Northern Securities, a large railroad holding company, under provision of the Sherman Antitrust Act of 1890. The act, little used previously, resolves the first suit brought by the Roosevelt administration in its "trust busting" campaign.
- Charles Rolls and Henry Royce sign an agreement to build motor cars.

Religion, Philosophy, Learning

- France severs diplomatic links with the Vatican. Church and state are separated in France.
- Lafcadio Hearn (1850–1904) writes Japan: an Attempt at Interpretation.
- Sigmund Freud publishes The Psychopathology of Everyday Life.
- Theodor Herzl, a Zionist leader, dies of a heart attack. Just prior to Herzl's death there had been a bitter dispute among delegates at the Sixth Zionist Congress in 1903 over the proposal by Joseph Chamberlain, colonial secretary of Great Britain, to provide territory in Uganda for a Jewish nation.

Science, Technology, Growth

- W.C. Gorgas eradicates yellow fever in Panama Canal Zone.
- Work begins on the Panama Canal.
- Marie Curie publishes Recherches sur les substances radioactives.
- First radio tunnel is made.
- Trans-Siberian railway opens, linking Russia to China.
- The first tractor, a gasoline powered farm vehicle, is constructed by Benjamin Holt, a blacksmith from Iowa.
- The Russian physiologist Ivan Pavlov wins a Nobel prize for his work on the digestive system.

VISUAL ARTS

- Pablo Picasso paints The Two Sisters.
- Henri Rousseau paints The Wedding.
- Salvador Dali, Spanish painter, is born.
- Two French films, Le barbier de Seville and La damnation de Faust, are released.

LITERATURE

- Anton Chekhov, Russian playwright, writes The Cherry Orchard; dies later that year.
- Christopher Isherwood, English novelist, is born.
- Graham Greene, English novelist, is born.
- Marlene Dietrich, German-born actress, is born.
- George Bernard Shaw's play Candida is performed in London.
- Jack London writes The Sea Wolf.
- Thomas Hardy writes The Dynasts.
- Hermann Hesse writes Peter Camenzind.
- O. Henry publishes the collection of short stories Cabbages and Kings.
- Frank Wedekind writes Die Büchse der Pandora.
- Henry James writes The Golden Bowl.
- James Barrie's play Peter Pan opens.

MUSIC

- Georges Balanchine, choreographer, is born in Paris.
- Anton Dvorak dies.
- Richard Strauss' Sinfonia Domestica premieres in New York.
- The first radio transmission of music occurs at Graz, Austria.
- The London Symphony Orchestra gives its first concert.
- Leos Janacek premieres the opera Jenufa in Brno.

DAILY LIFE

- The 10-hour work day is established in France.
- The first section of the New York City Subway system begins operation. The line, on which work had begun in 1900, runs from City Hall to 145th Street and Broadway in Manhattan.
- London's first electric underground train also goes into operation.
- World Exhibition and first American Olympics occur at St. Louis.
- Judo is first publicly demonstrated and taught to individuals in the U.S. by Mr. Yamashita of the Kodokan school of judo from Japan. Among Yamashita's pupils is Theodore Roosevelt.

In the beginning …

JACOPO PERI 1561–1633
CLAUDIO MONTEVERDI 1567–1643

Although often considered an Italian innovation, OPERA had its debut in Ancient Greece, where drama frequently incorporated singing, declamation and dance to tell a narrative tale. Ecclesiastical music dramas of the Middle Ages were also important precursors. But the operatic art form familiar to us today has its roots in Florence, between 1580 and 1589, where a group of musicians, poets and scholars explored the possibility of reviving tragic drama of the ancients.

The circle was known as the CAMERATA and consisted of writers, theorists and composers, including GIULIO CACCINI, OTTAVIO RINUCCINI and VINCENZO GALILEI (father of the famed astronomer). Their efforts exacted musical compositions that took special care to accentuate the dramatic inflection of their chosen text, to evoke its precise emotional shading and to find the ideal marriage between words and music. JACOPO PERI, a rival of Caccini and a collaborator with Rinuccini, produced the first known (but no longer existing) opera, Dafne, in 1597.

The Camerata met at the home of the nobleman GIOVANNI DE' BARDI. Thus, no sooner had opera had made its first appearance than it became a court activity, which fit the social and political conditions of the day. As a result of Bardi's influence, these composers were hired by the Grand Duke of Tuscany Ferdinand I, who gave them their first wide exposure. When his daughter, Marie de' Medici, married Henry IV of France, Peri's Euridice was produced at the ceremony, and Italian opera gained its first international premiere. Even though Euridice was a simply staged production accompanied by a small group of strings and flute, in 1600 this type of musical drama was considered revolutionary.

CLAUDIO MONTEVERDI'S Orfeo (1607) is the most significant opera of this period, more so than those works of the Florentines. The boldness of his harmonies and the richness of his orchestration dramatically developed the art form, and this work, along with L'incoronazione di Poppea (1642) are still popular pieces performed today.

Opera in Venice

FRANCESCO CAVALLI 1602–1676
ANTONIO CESTI 1623–1669

The new art form quickly spread to other Italian cities. By 1636, the first public opera house was opened in Venice and opera became quite popular among the people. Le nozze di Teti e di Pele, the first of FRANCESCO CAVALLI'S thirty-plus operas for the Venetian stage, premiered two years later. Competing with Monteverdi and ANTONIO CESTI (who took a post in Innsbruck after producing only two works for Venice), Cavalli quickly rose to the top.

At the same time, Italian stage designers were fast improving their techniques and were able to produce stupendous special effects, a happy coincidence for the new operatic art form. The use of the proscenium arch allowed the spectator to view the stage from a narrower angle, thus producing a better illusion of perspective. The proscenium also hid elaborate flying apparatus, and allowed for quick and seamless scene changes with drops from the top and flaps from the side wings. Spectacular stage effects became a speciality of French opera, and with the inclusion of ballet, became the part of established style of France by the 18th century.

North of Italy, Hamburg composer REINHARD KEISER (1694 – 1739) became the director of one of the first public opera houses in Germany. He often set libretti by Venetian librettists.

Baroque Opera in France, England and Germany

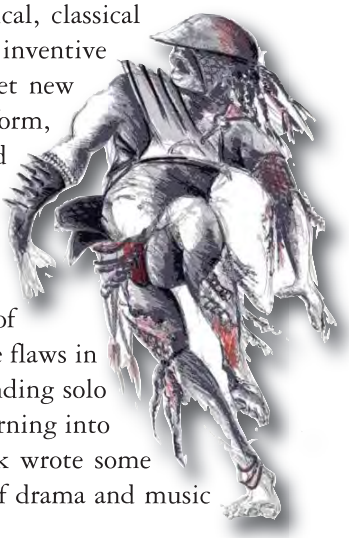
JEAN-BAPTISTE LULLY 1632–1687
HENRY PURCELL 1658/59–1695
GEORGE FRIDERIC HANDEL 1685–1759
CHRISTOPH WILLIBALD GLUCK 1714–1787

In 1646, Giovanni Battista Lulli arrived in France from Florence and tried to establish Italian opera in the French Court. He was unsuccessful because the reigning monarch, Louis XIV, preferred dance. Nonetheless, JEAN-BAPTISTE LULLY, as he became known, rose in royal favor by composing ballets for the king and eventually gained control of the Académie Royale de Musique, the official musical institution of France. Through Lully's influence in this important position, and by way of his own compositions, a distinctive French operatic form began to emerge and thrive on its own.

The Italian and French forms of opera were slow to catch on among the English, who preferred spoken theater. A compromise was reached in a form referred to as SEMI-OPERA, featuring spoken dialogue alternated with musical MASQUES (which often included dance). HENRY PURCELL'S The Fairy Queen (1692) is one popular example from this period. Purcell's first opera, Dido and Aeneas (1689), is his only opera in the Italian style and continues to be occasionally revived in modern times.

A scene from The Minnesota Opera's 1994 production of Handel's Julius Caesar

A major player in the early part of the 18th century was GEORGE FRIDERIC HANDEL, who began his career in Hamburg. As early as 1711, Handel enjoyed success in England and would remain there for the next forty years. During that time, he wrote 35 operas (many in the Italian style), most of which focused on historical, classical or romantic subjects. His inventive musical style began to set new standards for the art form, and his works redefined the dramatic potential of opera as a vital and vivid experience.



Another German, CHRISTOPH WILLIBALD GLUCK, arrived in England on the heels of Handel's last London operas, and later moving to Vienna, he began to see what he found to be flaws in the conventional Italian opera of the day. Singers had taken control of the productions, demanding solo arias and sometimes adding their own pieces to show off their vocal technique. Operas were turning into a collection of individual showpieces at the sacrifice of dramatic integrity. Although Gluck wrote some operas which shared these flaws, one work, Orfeo ed Euridice (1762), reasserted the primacy of drama and music by removing the DA CAPO (repeated and embellished) part of the aria, by using chorus and instrumental solos only to reinforce the dramatic action, and by not allowing the singers to insert their own music. Gluck completed his career in Paris, where he became a master of French opera's serious form, the TRAGÉDIE LYRIQUE.

During the 18th century, opera began to fall into two distinct categories: OPERA SERIA and OPERA BUFFA. Opera seria (serious opera) focused on historical, religious or Greco-Roman subjects. The glorification of saints, kings and gods went hand-in-hand with the grandiose baroque style and the spectacular stage effects of court opera. Librettist Pietro Metastasio provided 28 libretti that continued to serve composers again and again well into the 19th century. Opera buffa (comic opera) had its roots with the popular audience, each country specializing in its own distinct form. In France, CHARLES-SIMON FAVART'S operas of the 1740s parodied the serious tragédie lyriques of Lully (the Opéra-Comique, the Paris theater for comic opera, would later be named after him). In Naples, Italy, the INTERMEZZI (short comic works inserted in between acts of a serious opera), of GIOVANNI BATTISTA PERGOLESI paved the way to the development of opera buffa in the latter half of the 18th century. His masterpiece, La serva padrona (1733), is considered a milestone in the development of comic opera.

ANTONIO SALIERI 1750–1825
VICENTE MARTIN Y SOLER 1754–1806
WOLFGANG AMADEUS MOZART 1756–1791

Two composers are invariably linked to the Classical Period – FRANZ JOSEPH HAYDN and WOLFGANG AMADEUS MOZART. Of the former, few of his operas are produced today even though he wrote over 25, most of which were created and performed for his employer, Prince Nikolaus Esterházy. Mozart's operas, however, remain in repertory as some of the most frequently produced works. Of the five most favorite – The Abduction from the Seraglio (1782), The Marriage of Figaro (1786), Don Giovanni (1787), Così fan tutte (1790), The Magic Flute (1791) – two are SINGSPIELS (a popular German form, replacing sung recitative with spoken dialogue), two opera buffas and one opera "semi-seria." Two opera serias (the form Mozart preferred, incidently) frame his adult career – Idomeneo (1781) was his first mature opera and La clemenza di Tito (1791) was his last commission.

Lesser composers of this period include ANTONIO SALIERI (born in Legnago, settling later in Vienna), who served the court of Emperor Joseph II. Through the emperor's influence with his sister, Marie Antoinette, Salieri made headway in Paris as well, establishing himself as a worthy successor of Gluck in the serious vein of his tragédie lyriques. Returning to Vienna in 1784, Salieri found himself in strict competition with other leading composers of the day, GIOVANNI PAISIELLO and VINCENTE MARTÍN Y SOLER. These two composers were known partly from their brief service to Catherine the Great of Russia, along with several other advanced Italian composers including GIUSEPPE SARTI and DOMENICO CIMAROSA.

After the Revolution – French Grand Opera

FERDINANDO PAER 1771–1839
GASPARE SPONTINI 1774–1851
DANIEL-FRANÇOIS-ESPRIT AUBER 1782–1871
GIACOMO MEYERBEER 1791–1864

In the decades following the French revolution, FRENCH GRAND OPERA developed extensively, moving from a private entertainment for royalty to an art form eagerly consumed by the upwardly mobile bourgeoisie. Opera in France at the turn of the 19th century was dominated by expatriate Italian composers. First and most notable was LUIGI CHERUBINI, who established residence in Paris in 1785. Eventually rising to the position of director of the national conservatory, he virtually ceased composing operas in 1813. The most lasting work in his oeuvre is Médée of 1797.

FERDINANDO PAER came to prominence during the first empire of Napoleon I – he was engaged as the Emperor's maître de chapelle in 1807 and later became the director of the Opéra-Comique. Just before Napoleon's abdication, Paer assumed directorship of the Théâtre Italien, a post he held until it was yielded to Rossini in 1824. None of his many operas survive in the modern repertory, although the libretto he wrote for one, Leonora (1804), served to inspire Ludwig van Beethoven's only opera, Fidelio (1805). GASPARE SPONTINI was another Italian who moved to Paris and eventually ran the Théâtre Italien, a theater devoted to producing Italian works in their native language. Most popular among his repertoire were La Vestale (1807) and Fernand Cortez (1809).

French grand opera came into its own through the efforts of two composers: DANIEL-FRANÇOIS-ESPRIT AUBER and GIACOMO MEYERBEER. Collaborating with Eugène Scribe (whose plays would later serve as inspiration for a number of Verdi operas), Auber produced La muette de Portici (1828), the first definite grand opéra of this period, which proved extremely popular with French audiences. Characteristic of the genre was a five-act framework that incorporated spectacular stage effects, large crowd scenes and a ballet. A specific, mannered formula for the drama's unfolding was also inherent in the art form.

Meyerbeer brought grand opera to fruition first with Robert le diable (1831), then with Les Huguenots (1836), and with these works, also established a close relationship with Scribe. Two later works of note include La prophète (1849) and L'Africaine (1865), also cast in the grand opera schema.

Early 19th-century Italy – The Bel Canto composers

Back in Italy, opera saw the development of a distinctive style known as BEL CANTO. Bel canto (literally "beautiful singing") was characterized by the smooth emission of tone, beauty of timbre and elegance of phrasing. Music associated with this genre contained many TRILLS, ROULADES and other embellishments that showed off the particular singer's technique. Traditionally, a bel canto aria begins with a slow, song-like CANTABILE section followed by an intermediate MEZZO section with a slightly quicker tempo. It ends with a dazzling CABALETTA, the fastest section, where the singer shows off his or her talents. Often these were improvised upon, or replaced with "suitcase" arias of the singers' own choosing, much to the consternation of the composer.

GIOACHINO ROSSINI was the first and perhaps best known of the three composers associated with this style. In his early years, between 1813 and 1820, Rossini composed rapidly, producing two or three operas a year. The pace slowed after he moved to France in 1824 – there he produced five works for the Paris Opéra, several of which show tendencies of the French grand opera style. William Tell was his last opera – Rossini retired at age 37 with 39 more years to live.

GAETANO DONIZETTI and VINCENZO BELLINI were two other Italian Bel Canto composers who premiered operas in both Paris and Italy. A tendency that began with Rossini and continued into their works was the practice of accompanied recitatives. Opera to this point had been organized in a very specific manner with more elongated "numbers" (arias, duets, ensembles) alternated with recitative (essentially dialogue set to music, intended to move the action along). In Mozart's day, these recitative would be played by a harpsichord or fortepiano (sometimes doubled with cellos and basses) and was known as RECITATIVO SECCO. As Rossini's style progressed, the orchestra took over playing the recitatives which became known as RECITATIVO ACCOMPAGNATO. The practice continued into Verdi's day.

Three Masters of Opera

GIUSEPPE VERDI 1813–1901
RICHARD WAGNER 1813–1883
GIACOMO PUCCINI 1858–1924

A scene from Minnesota Opera's 1998 production of Verdi's Aida

GIUSEPPE VERDI's roots began in bel canto but the composer transformed the Italian style into a more fluid, less structured form. With a legacy of 26 operas, Verdi is never out of the repertory and four of these (Rigoletto, 1851; Il trovatore, 1853; La traviata, 1853; Aida, 1871) are some of the most familiar of the art form.

Verdi's contemporary, RICHARD WAGNER, is also considered one of the greats. Taking the idea of "fluidity" one step further, Wagner developed his operas into freely flowing MUSIC-DRAMAS united by melodic motifs that become associated with persons, places and things. Taking the grandeur of French opera one step further, he crafted his own libretti out of Nordic legends and created spectacular operatic moments. Wagner also greatly expanded the orchestra and developed his own particular brass instruments for greater impact. A Wagnerian singer is one with great stamina – they must sing over a large orchestra in an opera that can be up to four hours long.

Italian opera's successor to Verdi turned out to be GIACOMO PUCCINI. With a gift of popular melody and musical economy, his operas La bohème (1896), Tosca (1900) and Madame Butterfly (1904) remain at the top of the standard repertory.

LÉO DELIBES 1836–1891
GEORGES BIZET 1838–1875
JULES MASSENET 1842–1912
GUSTAVE CHARPENTIER 1860–1956

The grand opera schema continued into the latter half of the 19th century in such works as HECTOR BERLIOZ's Les Troyens (composed 1856 – 58), and CHARLES-FRANÇOIS GOUNOD's Faust (1859) and Roméo et Juliette (1867). An element of realism began to slip into the French repertoire, seen in works by GEORGES BIZET (Carmen, 1875) and GUSTAVE CHARPENTIER (Louise, 1897). JACQUES OFFENBACH revolutionized the art of comic operetta in such works as Orphée aux enfers (1858), La belle Hélène (1864) and La Périchole (1868). Other composers of this period include CAMILLE SAINT-SAËNS (Samson et Dalila, 1877), EDOUARD LALO (Le Roi d'Ys, 1875) and JULES MASSENET (Manon, 1884; Werther, 1892; Cendrillon, 1899).

Verismo in Late 19th-century Italy

RUGGERO LEONCAVALLO 1857–1919
PIETRO MASCAGNI 1863–1945
UMBERTO GIORDANO 1867–1948

A realist vein began to penetrate Italian opera toward the end of the 19th century, influenced in part by naturalism in French literature of the period and by the writings of an Italian literary circle, the SCAPIGLIATURA. Translated as the "dishevelled ones," the Scapigliatura displayed their distaste for bourgeois society in works of gritty realism, often bordering on the morbid and the macabre. Nearly all the members of the group (lead by GIOVANNI VERGA) led tragic lives ending in early death by alcoholism and suicide.

Operas to come out of the resulting VERISMO school include PIETRO MASCAGNI's Cavalleria rusticana (1890), RUGGERO LEONCAVALLO's Pagliacci (1892) and UMBERTO GIORDANO's Mala vita (1892). Other works are attributed to this movement by nature of their rapid action with passionate tension and violence quickly alternating with moments of great sentimentality.

Opera in Russia

MIKHAIL IVANOVICH GLINKA 1804–1857
PYOTR IL'YICH TCHAIKOVSKY 1840–1893
NIKOLAY ANDREYEVICH RIMSKY-KORSAKOV 1844–1908
MODEST PETROVICH MUSORGSKY 1839–1881
SERGEI PROKOFIEV 1891–1953
DMITRI SHOSTOKOVICH 1906–1975

Opera was introduced in Russia during the succession of powerful czarinas that culminated in the reign of Catherine the Great (ruled 1762 – 1796). She employed a number of important Italian composers (see above) and established St. Petersburg as a major city for the production of new opera, later to be elevated to the same par as London, Paris and Vienna by her descendent, Nicholas I (ruled 1825 – 1855). Of native Russian composers, the first to come to prominence was MIKHAIL GLINKA with A Life for the Tsar (1836), and later, Ruslan and Lyudmila (1842). PYOTR TCHAIKOVSKY, now known more for his ballets and symphonies, was a prolific composer of opera. His best works include Eugene Onegin (1879), Mazepa (1884) and The Queen of Spades (1890). Other Russian composers of the latter 19th century include NIKOLAY RIMSKY-KORSAKOV (The Snow Maiden, 1882; The Tsar's Bride, 1899; The Golden Cockerel, 1909) and MODEST MUSORGSKY (Boris Godunov, 1874).

A scene from Minnesota Opera's 1978 production of Prokofiev's The Love for Three Oranges

Russian opera continued into the 20th century with works by SERGEI PROKOFIEV composed The Love for Three Oranges (1921) and The Gambler (1929), among others. His crowning achievement, written toward the end of his life, was War and Peace (1948), based on the novel by Leo Tolstoy. DMITRI SHOSTOKOVICH's most notable work is Lady Macbeth of the Mtsensk District (1934). Both artists suffered censure from the Soviet government.

Into the 20th Century

CLAUDE DEBUSSY 1862–1918
RICHARD STRAUSS 1864–1949
PAUL DUKAS 1865–1935
ARNOLD SCHOENBERG 1874–1951
IGOR STRAVINSKY 1882–1971
ALBAN BERG 1885–1935
DARIUS MILHAUD 1892–1974
PAUL HINDEMITH 1895–1963
KURT WEILL 1900–1950
BENJAMIN BRITTEN 1913–1976

A scene from Minnesota Opera's 2010 production of Strauss' Salome

CLAUDE DEBUSSY's impressionist score for Pelléas et Mélisande (1902) paved the way for the radical changes in 20th-century opera. Also based on a Symbolist text by Maurice Maeterlinck was PAUL DUKAS' Ariane et Barbe-Bleue (1907), an opera about the notorious Bluebeard and his six wives. But causing the most sensation was RICHARD STRAUSS' Salome (1905), which pushed both tonality and the demands on the singers to the limits. He followed that opera with an even more progressive work, Elektra (1909), drawn from the Greek tragedy by Sophocles.

Important innovations were taking place in Vienna. ARNOLD SCHOENBERG made a complete break with tonality in his staged MONODRAMA Erwartung (1909), giving all twelve tones of the chromatic scale equal importance. He codified this approach in his TWELVE-TONE SYSTEM where a theme is created with a row of notes using all twelve notes of the chromatic scale. This "row" can be played in transposition, in reverse, upside-down, or in any combination of the three. Schoenberg also evolved a particular style of singing, SPRECHSTIMME, an intoned speech halfway between singing and speaking.

Sprechstimme was well suited to the expressionist nature of operas being produced at this time. Schoenberg's student, ALBAN BERG, employed it in Wozzeck (1925) and used the serialized twelve-tone method in his opera Lulu (1937). Another avant-garde composer, PAUL HINDEMITH, created a series of expressionist one-act operas that shocked audiences of the day: Murder, Hope of Women (1921), Das Nusch-Nuschi (1921) and Sancta Susanna (1922). Two later operas include one based on a short story by E.T.A. Hoffmann (Cardillac, 1926) and a satire on modern social behavior (News of the Day, 1929). At about the same KURT WEILL was causing an uproar with his new works: The Threepenny Opera (1928), The Rise and Fall of the City of Mahagonny (1930) and Der Silbersee (1933). The up-and-coming Nazi party did not favor his works, and he was forced to leave the country, eventually to settle in America.

In Paris, Russian IGOR STRAVINSKY was shocking audiences and causing riots with his ballet music. His early operas include The Nightingale (1914) and Mavra (1922). Oedipus Rex (1927) is representative of his first neoclassical works, using forms from the 18th century with modern tonality and orchestration. His later (and longest) opera, The Rake's Progress (1951), is a culmination of this neoclassical style. French composer DARIUS MILHAUD was extremely prolific in all genres of music. In opera, he produced the one-act Le pauvre matelot (1927) and a large-scale work in the tradition of grand opera, Christophe Columbe (1930). Later in his life he composed La mère coupable (1966), based on the Beaumarchais Figaro trilogy (which includes The Barber of Seville and The Marriage of Figaro).

In England, BENJAMIN BRITTEN emerged as one of Britain's foremost composers of opera since Henry Purcell. Out of his 16 original works for the stage the most popular include Peter Grimes (1945), Billy Budd (1951), Gloriana (1953) and The Turn of the Screw (1954).

20th- and 21st-century American Composers of Opera

VIRGIL THOMSON 1896–1989
GEORGE ANTHEIL 1900–1959
SAMUEL BARBER 1910–1981
GIAN CARLO MENOTTI 1911–2007
CARLISLE FLOYD 1926–
DOMINICK ARGENTO 1927–
CONRAD SUSA 1935–
PHILIP GLASS 1937–
JOHN CORIGLIANO 1938–
JOHN ADAMS 1947–

A scene from Minnesota Opera's 1998 American premiere of Antheil's Transatlantic

Paris in the 20s served to inspire the next generation of composers, several of which were expatriates from America. GEORGE ANTHEIL was the first American composer to have an opera premiered in Europe – his work, Transatlantic, was written in France but premiered in Frankfurt in 1930. Compatriot VIRGIL THOMSON studied with famed teacher Nadia Boulanger and later produced Four Saints in Three Acts (1934) and The Mother of Us All (1947), both to texts by Gertrude Stein. SAMUEL BARBER stayed on American soil, studying at the newly founded Curtis Institute in 1935. He went on to compose Vanessa (1958), and to open the new Metropolitan Opera House at Lincoln Center, Antony and Cleopatra (1966).

On Vanessa, Barber collaborated with another composer, GIAN CARLO MENOTTI, who wrote the libretto. Also the author of 25 libretti for his own operas, Menotti is best known for The Medium (1946), The Consul (1950), Amahl and the Night Visitors (1951) and The Saint of Bleecker Street (1954). Another American composing at about the same time was CARLISLE FLOYD, who favored American themes and literature. His most important works include Susannah (1955), Wuthering Heights (1958), The Passion of Jonathan Wade (1962) and Of Mice and Men (1970).

A scene from Minnesota Opera's 1989 production of Glass' The Juniper Tree

During the sixties and seventies, THE MINNESOTA OPERA was the site of many world premieres of lasting significance: CONRAD SUSA's Transformations (1973) and Black River (1975), and DOMINICK ARGENTO's The Masque of Angels (1964), Postcards from Morocco (1971), The Voyage of Edgar Allen Poe (1976), Miss Havisham's Wedding Night (1981) and Casanova's Homecoming (1985; revived in 2009). Other Argento works of merit include Miss Havisham's Fire (1979) and The Aspern Papers (1988).

Other composers currently at the fore include PHILIP GLASS, JOHN CORIGLIANO and JOHN ADAMS. The Minimalist music of Philip Glass has won popular acclaim among even non-opera-going audiences – his oeuvre includes Einstein on the Beach (1976), Ahknaten (1984), and most recently, The Voyage (1992), commissioned by the Metropolitan Opera to commemorate the 500th anniversary of Columbus' discovery of America. The Met also commissioned The Ghosts of Versailles from JOHN CORIGLIANO in 1991 – like Milhaud's opera of 1966, its text involves Beaumarchais' third part of the Figaro trilogy with the playwright himself appearing as the lover of 18th-century Queen of France Marie Antoinette. JOHN ADAMS' focus on contemporary events lead him to compose Nixon in China (1987) and The Death of Klinghoffer (1991).

Opera continues to be a living and vital art form in the revival of many of these works as well as the commissioning of new pieces. Among world premieres in the last two decades include TOBIAS PICKER'S Emmeline (1996) by Santa Fe Opera, DANIEL CATÁN'S Florencia en el Amazonas (1996) by Houston Grand Opera, MYRON FINK'S The Conquistador (1997) presented by San Diego Opera, ANTHONY DAVIS' Amistad (1997) presented by Lyric Opera of Chicago and Central Park (1999) by Glimmerglass Opera, a trilogy of short operas set by three composers. Recent seasons included such new works as POUL RUDERS' The Handmaid's Tale (Royal Danish Opera; 2000), BRIGHT SHENG'S Madame Mao (Santa Fe Opera; 2003), DANIEL CATÁN'S Salsipuedes (Houston Grand Opera; 2004), RICHARD DANIELPOUR'S Margaret Garner (Michigan Opera Theatre; 2005), RICKY IAN GORDON'S The Grapes of Wrath (Minnesota Opera; 2007), JONATHAN DOVE'S The Adventures of Pinocchio (Opera North, Leeds; 2008), HOWARD SHORE'S The Fly (Los Angeles Opera; 2009), JAKE HEGGIE'S Moby Dick (Dallas Opera; 2010), KEVIN PUTS' Silent Night (Minnesota Opera; 2011) and DOUGLAS J. CUOMO and JOHN PATRICK SHANLEY'S Doubt (Minnesota Opera; 2013).

Minnesota Opera combines a culture of creativity and fiscal responsibility to produce opera and opera education programs that expand the art form, nurture artists, enrich audiences and contribute to the vitality of the community.

Minnesota Opera's roots were planted in 1963 when the Walker Art Center commissioned Dominick Argento to compose an opera (The Masque of Angels) for its performing arts program, Center Opera. Center Opera focused on the composition and performance of new works by American composers, and, under the influence of the Walker Art Center, emphasized visual design. The company grew steadily, and in 1969 became an independent entity, changing its name in 1971 to The Minnesota Opera.

Throughout the first 12 years of its history, The Minnesota Opera was known as a progressive, "alternative" opera production company, a complement to the traditional orientation of the annual Metropolitan Opera tour and the productions of the St. Paul Opera. In 1976, The Minnesota Opera merged with the St. Paul Opera, adding a focus on traditional repertory to its program of contemporary opera.

In January 1985, The Minnesota Opera entered a new era with the opening of the Ordway Center for the Performing Arts in St. Paul, one of the nation's most respected performance halls. Today, the company presents its entire season at the Ordway.

In September 1990, the company moved its scenic and costume shops, rehearsal facilities and administrative offices to the 51,000 square-feet Minnesota Opera Center, which comprises three renovated warehouses on the Mississippi riverfront in Minneapolis. Winner of a 1990 Preservation Alliance of Minnesota Award, the Minnesota Opera Center is one of the finest opera production facilities in the nation and has served to strengthen the company both artistically and institutionally.

Throughout the 1990s, the company gained a national reputation for its high-quality, innovative productions of standard repertoire operas like Aida, Carmen and Turandot, which were seen on stages across the nation, and firmly established Minnesota Opera's reputation as a lead coproducer in the industry. In that decade, Minnesota Opera also grew institutionally, launching an artistic development campaign to establish a foundation for the expansion of its season and increased artistic quality.

In 1997, the company launched its Resident Artist Program to bridge the gap between an artist's academic training and their professional life on the world stage. The RAP is acclaimed for its exceptional, intense and individualized training as well as the elite group of young artists it produces. Alumni have earned engagements at prestigious houses such as the Metropolitan Opera, the Salzburg Festival and Covent Garden.

In 2000, Artistic Director Dale Johnson articulated a new artistic vision for the company inspired by bel canto ("beautiful singing"), the ideal upon which Italian opera is based. Bel canto values, which emphasize intense emotional expression supported by exquisite technique, inform every aspect of the company's programs, from repertoire selection, casting and visual design to education and artist training. As one manifestation of its philosophy, Minnesota Opera is committed to producing one work from the early 19th-century Bel Canto period each season, attracting luminary singers like Bruce Ford, Vivica Genaux, Brenda Harris and Sumi Jo to its stage.

Minnesota OPERA

Minnesota Opera is also recognized for its progressive and far-reaching educational programs. Residencies in schools, opera education classes and pre-performance discussions are building an audience for tomorrow and enhancing the enjoyment of audiences today.

Throughout its history, Minnesota Opera has attracted international attention for its performances of new operas and innovative productions of masterworks. Among its most renowned world and American premieres are: Dominick Argento's Postcard from Morocco, The Voyage of Edgar Allan Poe and Casanova's Homecoming, William Mayer's A Death in the Family, Libby Larsen's Frankenstein, The Modern Prometheus, Oliver Knussen and Maurice Sendak's Where the Wild Things Are, Conrad Susa's Transformations and Black River, PDQ Bach's The Abduction of Figaro, Robert Moran's From the Towers of the Moon, Gioachino Rossini's Armida, Evan Chen's Bok Choy Variations, George Antheil's Transatlantic, Poul Ruders' The Handmaid's Tale, Laurent Petitgirard's Joseph Merrrick dit Elephant Man, Saverio Mercadante's Orazi e Curiazi, Ricky Ian Gordon's The Grapes of Wrath, Reinhard Keiser's The Fortunes of King Croesus, Jonathan Dove's The Adventures of Pinocchio, Kevin Puts' Pulitzer Prize-winning Silent Night and Douglas J. Cuomo's Doubt.

Building on the legacy of its commitment to new work and following the overwhelming success of its commission of The Grapes of Wrath in 2007, Minnesota Opera launched the New Works Initiative, a landmark program designed to invigorate the operatic repertoire through the production and dissemination of new commissions and revivals of contemporary American works. The seven-year, $7 million program includes an international coproduction (The Adventures of Pinocchio, 2009), three revivals (Casanova's Homecoming in 2010; Wuthering Heights in 2011 and The Dream of Valentino in 2013) and three commissions (Silent Night in 2011; Doubt in 2013 and The Manchurian Candidate in 2015).

On the Minnesota Opera stage, talented national and internationally known artists are brought together to create productions of the highest artistic integrity, emphasizing the balance and total integration of theatrical and musical values. Throughout the past five decades, the company has presented such artists as Tim Albery, Isabel Bayrakdarian, John Lee Beatty, Harry Bicket, Richard Bonynge, William Burden, John Conklin, Roxana Constantinescu, David Daniels, Bruce Ford, Elizabeth Futral, Vivica Genaux, Colin Graham, Denyce Graves, Greer Grimsley, Nancy Gustafson, Brenda Harris, Jason Howard, Judith Howarth, Robert Indiana, Robert Israel, Sumi Jo, Kelly Kaduce, Antony McDonald, Catherine Malfitano, Daniel Massey, Johanna Meier, Suzanne Mentzer, Erie Mills, Sherrill Milnes, Julia Migenes, Fernando de la Mora, James Morris, Suzanne Murphy, Maureen O'Flynn, Susanna Phillips, Ashley Putnam, Patricia Racette, James Robinson, Neil Rosenshein, William Shimell, James Valenti, David Walker and Keith Warner.

Minnesota Opera, now the 13th largest opera company in the nation with an annual budget of $10.2 million (Fiscal Year 2012), is guided by President and General Director Kevin Ramch and Artistic Director Dale Johnson.

Today Minnesota Opera is enjoying unprecedented stability and unity of mission, working toward its vision to create a new, dynamic opera company model based upon innovation, world-class artistic quality and strong community service.

The Elements of Opera

Often called "all the arts in one" opera includes the Aristotelian elements of drama: theme, spectacle, plot, diction, movement and music. A production is truly successful only when these components work together. Many individuals are engaged to accomplish this purpose.

IN THE BEGINNING

A subject is selected by a COMPOSER. It may be mythical, biblical, historical, literary or based on current events. A LIBRETTIST is employed to adapt the story into poetic verse and the composer then writes the music (or SCORE).

THE OPERA COMPANY

An opera company's ARTISTIC DIRECTOR agrees to stage the work. In many cases, an opera has already been written and staged many times.

ADMINISTRATION

The company's MARKETING department sells tickets and the DEVELOPMENT department raises funds through donations to cover the costs of the production. The FINANCE department controls costs and balances the production's budget. The EDUCATION department prepares the audience for what they are going to see on stage.

CASTING

The opera company's ARTISTIC DIRECTOR selects performers from auditions. These performers are divided into PRINCIPALS, COMPRIMARIOS (singers in secondary roles), CHORISTERS, and players for the ORCHESTRA. Often in a production, SUPERNUMERARIES are employed (people who act but do not sing). Sometimes the opera has a BALLET which requires dancers, or a BANDA which requires orchestra members to play on stage.

SETS AND COSTUMES

A design team is assembled consisting of a STAGE DIRECTOR, SET DESIGNER and COSTUME DESIGNER. They agree on a visual concept for the opera and sets and costumes are created.

REHEARSAL

The production goes into REHEARSAL. Principals, choristers and the orchestra often rehearse separately until the director begins staging. The CONDUCTOR of the orchestra attends staging rehearsals which are accompanied by a RÉPÉTITEUR, or rehearsal pianist. The orchestra joins the singers for the first time at the SITZPROBE. During TECH WEEK, sets and lighting are put into place at the theater. Several DRESS REHEARSALS (with the performers in costume and the orchestra in the pit) occur before the first performance of the opera. Sometimes these rehearsals are attended by a select audience.

THE PREMIERE

The first presentation of the opera to the general public is known as the PREMIERE. Long before the curtain goes up, preparations are being made.

6:00 PM — Continuity
STAGEHANDS (1) set the scenery for the first act of the production.

6:15 PM — Makeup calls
PRINCIPALS and COMPRIMARIOS (2) begin to arrive at the theater to be put into costume by DRESSERS, then are wigged by the WIGMASTER (1A) and made up with theatrical makeup.

6:30 PM — House opens
Opera patrons are admitted to the AUDITORIUM (4) and seated by USHERS (5). The HOUSE MANAGER (6) oversees the activities in the front of the house, including the ushers and concession sales. The BOX OFFICE MANAGER (7) takes care of any last minute ticket purchases. Patrons may remain in the LOBBY (8) to attend an informational session of Opera Insights, led by the Opera's music staff.

6:45 PM — Notes
The STAGE DIRECTOR may give last minute instructions to the cast before the performance begins.

7:00 PM — Warm-ups
PRINCIPALS and COMPRIMARIOS (2) warm-up in their dressing rooms.

7:15 PM — Chorus and orchestra warm-ups
The CHORUS (10), who have already put on their costumes, warms up with the CHORUSMASTER. The ORCHESTRA warms up in the ORCHESTRA PIT (11).

7:25 PM — Places
The PRODUCTION STAGE MANAGER (12) calls places. Two other STAGE MANAGERS (13) are posted stage left and stage right to cue the entrances of the singers and choristers.

7:28 PM — Orchestra tune
The principal oboe gives a concert "A" to which the ORCHESTRA tunes. The SURTITLE PROMPTER (15) cues the preshow titles. The CONDUCTOR shakes the CONCERTMASTER's hand and mounts the podium.

7:30 PM — Curtain
The house lights goes out, and the FLYMAN (1A) raises the CURTAIN (16). The show begins.

8:25 PM — Intermission
The audience returns to the LOBBY (8) for refreshments while the STAGEHANDS (1) reset the STAGE (14) for the next act.

10:15 PM — Curtain calls
The performance ends, and the STAGE DIRECTOR, DESIGNERS, CONDUCTOR and SINGERS get to take a bow for all their hard work.

STAGEHANDS move scenery and props and handle lighting. DRESSERS help the cast into their often elaborate costumes.

PRINCIPALS sing the major roles. COMPRIMARIOS sing minor named roles. CHORISTERS make up the rest of the singing cast and are prepared by the CHORUSMASTER.

The CONDUCTOR leads the orchestra. The STAGE DIRECTOR instructs the cast where to move onstage. He or she generally stays only for the PREMIERE.

The ORCHESTRA rehearses several times independently from the singers. The first rehearsal during which singers and orchestra perform together is called a SITZPROBE. The CONCERTMASTER is the first violin and is responsible for "bowing" the string parts so the performers all move their bows together.

The PRODUCTION STAGE MANAGER "calls" the show, announcing entrance and lighting cues. Two other STAGE MANAGERS assist in getting the cast and chorus on and off the stage. The SURTITLE PROMPTER cues the English translations projected above the stage from the control booth.

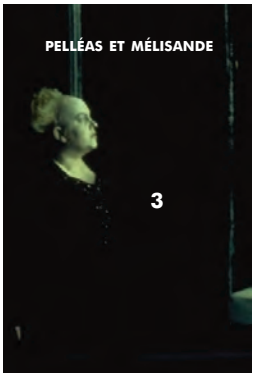
The most important part of the opera is the singers. They are categorized into six different voice types.

THE SOPRANO

High-voiced woman. Voted "Most Likely to Die Before the Curtain Goes Down." Putty in the hands of the TENOR, BARITONE and occasionally even the MEZZO (especially if she is in pants).

THE MEZZO-SOPRANO

Middle- to lower-voiced woman. Nobody's pawn. May hook up with the BARITONE, unless she's playing a young man, in which case she usually gets the SOPRANO.



THE CONTRALTO

Lowest-voiced woman. Usually the mother, maid or duenna (an older woman charged with monitoring the virtue of the impressionable SOPRANO). Generally the CONTRALTO calls herself a MEZZO in order to get more work.

THE TENOR

High-voiced man. Whether comic or tragic, most often the misunderstood romantic role. Often kill themselves; almost always get the girl.

THE BASS AND BARITONE

Middle- to lowest-voiced man. Usually the bad guy, the father or guardian, or the hero's best friend. If he hooks up with another singer, it's usually a MEZZO.

THE FAT LADY

There is no fat lady in helmet and horns—that is a myth. It ain't over till the curtain goes down for the last time and everyone around you is clapping.

Minnesota OPERA

1 - SOPRANO; 2 - MEZZO; 3 - CONTRALTO; 4 - TENOR; 5 - BARITONE; 6 - BASS

acoustics	The science of sound; qualities which determine hearing facilities in an auditorium, concert hall, opera house, theater, etc.
act	A section of the opera, play, etc. usually followed by an intermission.
area lights	Provide general illumination.
aria	(air, English and French; ariette, French). A formal song sung by a single vocalist. It may be in two parts (binary form), or in three parts (see da capo) with the third part almost a repetition of the first. A short aria is an arietta in Italian, ariette or petit air in French.
arioso	Adjectival description of a passage less formal and complete than a fully written aria, but sounding like one. Much recitative has arioso, or songlike, passages.
azione teatrale	(It.: 'theatrical action', 'theatrical plot'). A species of Serenata that, unlike many works in this genre, contained a definite plot and envisioned some form of staging.
atonality	Lack of a definite tonal focus, all sharps and flats being applied in the score when necessary. With no key and therefore no sense of finality, such music sounds odd to the conservative ear, but with practice the listener can find pleasure in it.
artistic director	The person responsible for the artistic concept of the opera – the overall look and "feel" of the production.
backdrop	A large, painted surface at the rear of the stage, associated with old-fashioned stage settings, two-dimensional, but often striving with painted shadows and perspective to suggest a third dimension.
backstage	The area of the stage not visible to the audience, usually where the dressing rooms are located.
ballad opera	A play with many songs; the number has ranged from fifteen to seventy-five. In the early eighteenth century its music was drawn from popular folk song or quite sophisticated songs appropriated from successful operas.
banda	A group of musicians who perform onstage or slightly offstage.
baritone	The male singing voice which is higher than a bass but lower than a tenor.
baroque	A style of art and music characteristic in particular of the Louis xiv period in France and the Charles II period and after in England. Baroque pictorial art is associated with theatrical energy and much decoration but nevertheless respects classical principles. The music theater of the Baroque, highly pictorial, developed the opera seria, with comic intermezzi between the acts.
bass	The lowest male singing voice.
bel canto	Although meaning simply "beautiful song," the term is usually applied to the school of singing prevalent in the eighteenth and nineteenth centuries (Baroque and Romantic) which gave much attention to vocal purity, control, and dexterity in ornamentation.
bravo (a) (i)	An acknowledgement of a good performance shouted during moments of applause (the ending is determined by the gender and the number of performers).
bravura	Implying brilliance and dexterity (bravura singing, a bravura aria, etc.). Intended for display and the technical execution of difficult passages.

CABALETTA	A fast, contrasting short aria sung at the close of or shortly following a slower aria (called a cantabile, often for vocal effect only but sometimes dramatically motivated.
CADENCE	A resting place or close of a passage of music, clearly establishing tonality.
CADENZA	An elaborate passage near the end of an aria, which shows off the singer's vocal ability.
CAMERATA	A group of musicians, poets and scholars who met in Florence in 1600 and created opera.
CANTILENA	Originally a little song, but now generally referring to smooth cantabile (It: 'singable,' or 'singing') passages.
CAVATINA	Originally an aria without a repeated section. Later used casually in place of aria.
CHORUS	A group of singers (called choristers) who portray townspeople, guests or other unnamed characters; also refers to the music written for these people.
CHORUS MASTER	Person who prepares the chorus musically (which includes rehearsing and directing them).
CLAQUE	A group attending performances in the larger opera houses and paid by leading singers to encourage and direct applause (a member of which is a claqueur).
COLORATURA	A voice that can sing music with many rapid notes, or the music written for such a voice.
COMMEDIA DELL'ARTE	Masked comedy or improvised Italian comedy of the sixteenth, seventeenth, and eighteenth centuries. A popular theatrical form with a sketched-out plot and stock characters, a pair of lovers without masks surrounded by comedians—Arlecchino, Brighella, Pantalone, Dottore, etc. Some of Mozart's and Rossini's operas retain the vestiges of these characters. Strauss, Busoni, and other recent composers have deliberately used them.
COMPRIMARIO	A small singing role, often a servant or other minor character.
CONDUCTOR	The person who supervises all musical detail, rehearsals and leads the orchestra and advises the artistic director about the hiring of singers and musical staff (also called the music director).
CONTRALTO	The lowest female singing voice.
COUNTERTENOR	The highest natural male voice, not a castrato. True male altos may be heard in choirs. The term falsettist is sometimes used but disputed.
CYCLORAMA	A curved curtain or wall enclosing the playing area of the stage and hiding the work areas behind it.
DA CAPO	(It: 'from the top, or back to the beginning'). A familiar direction in music. A da capo aria of the Baroque period repeats the first part of the aria, with different embellishments, after the singing of a contrasting second part.
DESIGNER	The person who creates the lighting, costumes or sets.
DIAPHRAGM	The muscle which separates the chest cavity from the abdominal cavity. It is used by singers for breath control and it allows them to "project" their voices to the back of the auditorium.
DIRECTOR	The person who instructs the singer/actors in their movements on stage and in the interpretation of their roles.
DOWNSTAGE	The front of the stage nearest the audience.
DRAME LYRIQUE	(It: dramma lirico). Modern term for opera, not necessarily of a lyrical character. The English term "lyrical drama" is used in the same way.

DRAMMA PER MUSICA	A term that refers to text expressly written to be set by a composer and by extension also to the composition. The term was the one most commonly used for serious Italian opera in the eighteenth century (as opposed to the modern term opera seria, with which it is in effect interchangeable).
DUET	Music written for two people to play or sing together.
EMBELLISHMENT	Decoration or ornament. A grace-note addition to the vocal line (also instrumental) of any kind, a four-note turn, or a trill.
ENSEMBLE	Three or more people singing at the same time, or the music written for such a group.
FALSETTO	The falsetto voice is of high pitch and produced by the vibrations of only one part of the vocal folds. The normal male voice sounds strained and effeminate in falsetto, but a natural alto or high tenor can produce effective vocal sound by this method. It is a singing mannerism to produce high tenor notes in falsetto.
FESTA TEATRALE	(It.: 'theatrical celebration'). A title applied to a dramatic work. Feste teatrali fall into two quite distinct classes: opera and serenatas.
FINALE	The last musical number of an opera, or of an act of an opera.
FIORITURA	(It: 'flowering', 'flourish'; plural fioriture). When a composition for the voice contains decorative writing such as scales, arpeggios, trills and gruppetti (the groups of notes sometimes known in English as 'turns'), it is described as 'florid' and the decorations themselves will be described collectively as 'fioritura'. It is a more accurate term than 'coloratura', which is frequently used as an alternative.
FLATS	Stretched canvas and wood panels on which scenery is painted.
FLIES	The space above a stage where scenery is "flown" when not in use. A counterweight system simplifies raising and lowering flats, larger set pieces, and back drops.
FULL DRESS REHEARSAL	The final rehearsal before opening night with all singers present in full costume.
GRAND OPERA	Traditionally, a serious epic or historical work in four or five acts which makes extensive use of the chorus and also includes a ballet. Also contains magnificent special effects.
GRID	Gridiron. Framework from which lines are hung and battens attached for the "flying" of scenery. The grid is situated high in the flies just beneath the ceiling of the fly loft.
HANDLUNG FÜR MUSIK	(Ger: 'action in music'). Term used by Wagner to describe the libretto for Lohengrin and Tristan und Isolde; it has occasionally been used since.
INTERLUDE	A short piece of instrumental music played between scenes or acts to fill in delays brought about by scenery changes.
INTERMEZZO	An instrumental interlude played between acts, or short two-act comic opera played between the acts of an opera seria.
LEITMOTIV	A recurring musical figure used to identify a person, event or idea.
LEGATO	A smooth, flowing line. In vocal music it demands steadiness of emission and a sensitivity to phrasing.
LIBRETTO	The words of an opera.

MASKING — A scenic frame or device to prevent the audience from seeing into the wings of the stage. Door and window openings are usually masked, often with realistic backings.

MASQUE — An entertainment popular in the late sixteenth century and throughout the seventeenth. A form of "total theater," it combined music, scenic splendor, poetry, and some drama. Milton's Comus, with music by Henry Lawes, is the most celebrated.

MELODRAMA — A basically serious play, frequently using comedy for relief, it only outwardly resembles tragedy. The conflicts and calamities are more interesting in themselves than are the characters, who tend to be stereotyped, good and bad. Passion, excitement, and action, often unmotivated, are emphasized. Intended for undiscriminating audiences, it uses much music to stimulate the emotions and much scenic effect to please the eye.

MÉLODRAME — In addition to being the French word for melodrama, this term refers to a technique, which became popular during the eighteenth century, of playing orchestral music under or between the phrases of spoken dialogue.

MELODRAMMA — Dramma per musica (drama for music) and Melodramma (sung drama) antedate by many years the term opera, now in general use for works of this kind.

MEZZA VOCE — Half-voice, with reference to a passage required to be sung softly throughout. A similar term, messa di voce, has the different meaning of beginning a tone softly, swelling it gradually, and then softening it again.

MEZZO-SOPRANO — The middle female singing voice, lower than soprano but higher than contralto.

MOTIVE — A short musical idea on which a melody is based.

MUSICAL PLAY — A convenient but inexact designation which has become popular in English-speaking countries to distinguish the more ambitious works in the popular field of lyric theater from (a) European operetta or imitations thereof, (b) musical comedy of the vaudevillian sort, and (c) opera, especially in New York where the form is supposed to belong to the Metropolitan and the New York City Opera Company and is somewhat provincially considered "poison at the box office." David Ewen regards Show Boat, 1927, as the first work of the new genre, the musical play. By the 1930s, this term had become a catchall.

OPERA — A term now used to cover musical-dramatic pieces of all kinds except musical comedy and operetta, although comic opera comes very close to these forms. The seventeenth-century Italian term for opera was Dramma per musica or Melodramma.

OPERA BUFFA — A precise Italian definition, meaning Italian comic opera of the eighteenth and early nineteenth centuries. Musical numbers are strung along a continuum of dry recitative.

OPÉRA COMIQUE — French light opera of the eighteenth and nineteenth centuries. Strictly speaking, any theater piece written with spoken dialogue between the musical numbers (Faust, Carmen, and Manon) whether a comedy or not. The Paris Opéra Comique is also called the Salle Favart and was originally the home of all works using spoken dialogue, while the Opéra confined itself to through-composed works.

OPERA SERIA — Literally "serious opera." An opera form of the seventeenth and early eighteenth centuries which uses historical, biblical or mythological subjects with a focus on revenge, danger and death.

OPERETTA	A loosely used term, often used interchangeably with comic opera, opéra bouffe, and musical comedy. In Italian it originally meant "little opera," a short, light musical work. It has come to mean a full-length piece on a light subject, with musical numbers and spoken dialogue, and characterized by ingratiating tunes, decorative dances, colorful settings, social irresponsibility, a slender dramatic line, and the requirement of at least two well-trained voices.
ORATORIO	A musical-dramatic work originating in the twelfth century, now generally performed, in contradistinction to opera, without action, costumes, and scenery. They are invariably associated with sacred subjects.
ORCHESTRA PIT	The sunken area in front of the stage where the orchestra sits.
OVERTURE	An orchestral introduction to the opera, usually played before the acting begins.
PARLANDO	(It: 'in speaking style'). An informal and realistic technique occasionally used in Italian opera, bringing singing close to speaking.
PORTAMENTO	An Italian singing term, asking the voice to glide from one note to another at some distance. An authentic and effective device, to be distinguished from the mannerism of scooping.
PRINCIPAL	A major singing role, or the singer who performs such a role.
PROSCENIUM	The stage opening, resembling a three-sided picture frame. Immediately behind it and concealing the acting areas is the curtain. The proscenium arch was originally created in the 1700s to conceal the machinery used to create special stage effects.
QUARTET	Four singers, or the music written for that group.
RECITATIVE	Musical singing in the rhythm of speech.
RECITATIVO ACCOMPAGNATO	A sung passage with orchestral accompaniment, lacking the formality of an aria, yet more declamatory and agitated than recitativo secco.
RECITATIVO SECCO	Dry recitative. A sung passage so close to everyday speech that although the pitches and time values are respected, a conversational quality prevails. A keyboard instrument generally supplies the sketchy accompaniment. Commonly used in Italian opera seria and opera buffa.
REPERTORY	A system of stage production in which a number of works are played, virtually in rotation, by a resident company throughout a season.
RÉPÉTITION	French term for "rehearsal." A répétition générale is a dress rehearsal to which critics and guests are invited.
REVOLVE	Revolving stage. Turntable. A section of the stage floor (permanently established) or a circular construction on a central pivot which revolves, to change scenery or supply movement of objects as well as people.
RITORNELLO	A short instrumental piece, literally meaning repetition or refrain. In Monteverdi's works it usually consists of a few bars played between the verses of a strophic song.
ROCOCO	In art, associated with the late Baroque period and the late eighteenth century. In contrast to the dignity, heaviness, and occasional pomposity of Baroque, Rococo art is playful, lighter in tone and color, and adorned with scrolls, acorns, and shells.
ROLE	The character that a singer portrays.

ROMANTICISM	The movement strongly associated with nineteenth-century Germany, but felt through all Europe and responsible for far-reaching changes in all forms of art. Rebels against the establishment (which was founded on a deep respect for the classics), the romanticists opposed authority and advocated freedom from formal regulations. They encouraged a subjective, strongly emotional approach as an antidote to classical decorum.
SCORE	The music of an opera or other musical work in which the parts for different performers appear vertically above one another.
SCRIM	A thin curtain, often painted. When lit from behind, one can see through it.
SERENATA	A dramatic cantata, normally celebratory or eulogistic in intent, for two or more singers with orchestral accompaniment. In dramaturgical respects the serenata most closely resembles the Baroque oratorio.
SINFONIA	A symphonic work the precedes an opera (English: overture); a shorter version is referred to as a prelude.
SINGSPIEL	A German form of comic opera with spoken dialogue.
SITZPROBE	A sit-down rehearsal where the performers sing with the orchestra for the first time.
SOPRANO	The highest female singing voice.
SPRECHSTIMME	A form of declamation halfway between speech and song. Instead of exactly notated pitch an approximation is given. The time, however, is given exactly and the singer is not allowed absolute license. Notations up and down are also meant to be respected. This style of singing is found in the works of Schoenberg and Berg.
STAGE LEFT	The left side of the stage from the performer's perspective as s/he faces the audience.
STAGE RIGHT	The right side of the stage from the performer's perspective as s/he faces the audience.
STRETTA	An accelerated passage at the end of an aria, scene, or act.
TENOR	The highest male singing voice.
TESSITURA	Literally "texture." The approximate range of a role or an aria.
THROUGH-COMPOSED	Through-composed opera is a continuous music drama uninterrupted by spoken dialogue or obviously recognizable recitative.
TRAGÉDIE LYRIQUE	A French term associated mainly with Lully and Rameau. Tragédie lyrique comes somewhat closer to the spoken play in dramatic expressiveness than does the Italian opera seria of the same period, which may exceed it in vocal expressiveness.
TRILL	A musical ornament requiring the rapid alternation of two adjacent notes.
TROUSER ROLE	Also called "pants role." The part of a male character sung by a woman, usually a mezzo-soprano.
UNDERSTUDY	A replacement for a particular role in case of illness or emergency (also called a "cover").
VERISMO	A type of late nineteenth and early twentieth-century Italian opera that emphasized realistic subjects.
WANDELPROBE	Musical rehearsal which allows the conductor to hear what the singers sound like when they perform on the set.
WINGS	The sides of the stage where the performers wait before making their entrances.
